DEMOCRATS DECIDED TO DESIGNATE LITTLE AS MAYORALTY CANDIDATE

At a Meeting of the Leaders of the Party Held in the City Hall Wednesday—Thomas F. Coughlin for Alderman-at-Large, and Judge Schirick as City Judge.

For Mayor, Dr. W. E. E. Little of St. James street.

For city judge, Judge Harry E. Schirick.

That is the Democratic ticket as so far selected by former Mayor Irwin and several of his advisers at an executive session that was executive, and to which only tried and true Democratics were admitted, they even "bounced" the reporter of the official Democratic organ as they were not positive as to his political convictions. The executive session was held Wednesday evening in the city court room at the city hall.

It was expected to have made public the names of the various candidates for supervisors and aldermen, but it developed that considerable hard feeling has been brought to the surface in several of the wards. In the Eighth ward it is said that Alderman Kullmann does not feel as though he was being used right in turning him down for supervisor and handing that plum to Hugh McTague. In other wards the same situation exists.

Mr. Irwin and his executive staff, however, expect to smooth out all difficulties within a short time, and will then be prepared to announce the rest of the slate.

At the meeting Wednesday evening there was quite a large attendance of the old line Democrats including such men as W. Scott Gillespie, Dr. Sam Stern, Andrew J. Murphy, Emanuel Metzger, Milton O. Auchmoody and others. Dr. Stern before the session adjourned moved it go on record as approving the designation of Mr. Irwin as the Democratic candidate for the supreme court bench.

Mr. Irwin announced before the session closed that the next meeting would be held next Thursday evening at which time he expected the ward committeemen to be ready to present the names of the proposed candidates for supervisors and alderman so that the city ticket could be completed.

MRS. HARRISON NOW IN BERLIN

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Berlin, Aug. 4.—U. S. Senator Joseph France, of Maryland, who has just arrived here from Riga, predicted today that the Moscow soviet government will weather the storm which has been thrown around it by plague and famine. He said he did not believe Lenine would fall.

Mrs. Marguerite Harrison, of Baltimore, whose release from a Russian prison was effected by Senator France, while he was in Moscow, and who accompanied the senator from Riga, is under the care of a physician. Fortunately her family doctor from Baltimore, Dr. Hugh Young, happened to be in Berlin when Mr. Harrison arrived here. She is now under his care at the Adlon Hotel.

Mrs. Harrison is run down from undernourishment while in prison, but her condition is not serious and the physician said that good care and plenty of healthful food would soon restore her to normal condition.

Both Senator France and Mrs. Harrison will sail for America upon the steamship Rotterdam on August 17.

Senator France looked worn and said he was suffering greatly from fatigue. He was averse to giving an interview, but when asked what effect famine and cholera would have upon the stability of the Lenine government and was told of the rumor that Lenine was already tottering, he replied:

"On the contrary common necessity seems to have had a tremendously unifying force in consolidating the Russian people of all convictions behind the Moscow government. Among those giving aid are even Czarists who previously had refused to work. Now they are co-operating."

Senator France was told at Moscow and Riga that about 25 per cent of the tillable soil of Russia was blighted by drouth, but a considerable amount of it was not under cultivation so that the real productivity effected is between 7 and 10 per cent. Senator France was told that if it had not been for the long dry spell Russia would not only have had enough grain for her own use but would have had some left over for export.

About 10,000,000 Russians are affected by the famine. Asked what he would do when he reached Washington the senator replied:

"I have not made any plans. I can only say that I have pressing personal affairs in the United States that need my attention."

Mrs. Harrison will be able to leave Berlin tomorrow. In addition to Dr. Young, she was examined by a Berlin specialist.

CARUSO FUNERAL HELD IN NAPLES

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Naples, Aug. 4.—The most impressive funeral services Naples has known in modern times occurred today when the late Enrico Caruso was buried amidst the lamentations of the grief stricken populace.

A tremendous crowd attended the last rites, including prominent persons who had come from various parts of Italy and even from Paris. That the singer was really the idol of the Neapolitan populace was made plain by the evidences of grief on every hand.

King Victor Emmanuel had suggested funeral services in the basilica of the Cathedral of San Francesco de Paola and it was in that historic edifice that the funeral services were conducted, according to the liturgy of the Roman Catholic Church.

The Italian government and the municipality were represented.

Caruso's body had been lying in state in the death room of the Vesuvius Hotel since Wednesday morning. The plan to put it on public view on the stage of a local theater was not put into effect.

Richard W. Child, the American ambassador, has sent a message of condolence to Mrs. Caruso expressing not only his personal sympathy but that of the United States.

Mrs. Caruso has not yet made plans to retun to New York, as there are a number of technicalities concerning the estate to be fixed up.

ULSTER COUNTY REPUBLICANS ASSEMBLE IN COUNTY CONVENTION

Unofficial Gathering of Representatives of the Party to Nominate Candidates to be Supported at the Official Primaries for County and City Offices.

The unofficial Republican county convention met at the court house today, and after organizing and listening to a brief address from Supreme Court Justice Joseph A. Rosch of Monticelllo, recessed at 1:15 o'clock for dinner, to reconvene at 2:30 o'clock.

The convention was called to order at 12:45 o'clock by County Chairman Philip Elting, who introduced Judge Rosch, who came to Kingston to be the luncheon guest of the Kiwanis Club. He had prevailed on Judge Rosch, he said, to appear before the convention in order that he might be known. Upon the election of Judge Chase to the court of appeals bench, he said, the governor had appointed Judge Rosch to serve until the end of the current year. It had been agreed that he would be the Republican candidate this fall to succeed himself and it was proper that he should be known to the people of the district.

Judge Rosch's Address.

Judge Rosch said that inasmuch as he was in Kingston, he had been prevailed on to present himself at this convention at least for inspection by those to whom he might otherwise appear as a stranger.

In January, said Judge Rosch, he had been appointed justice of the supreme court for this district. The term of his appointment was a somewhat temporary one and it was necessary for him to present himself to the people this fall as a candidate for election.

Occupying the position he did, he did not think it necessary to enter upon a discussion of political questions or policies. On the other hand, he did not wish anyone to think he was so well satisfied with himself that it was unnecessary to appear in public.

The convention now assembled, he said, would recommend delegates to be elected to the judicial district convention before which he would be a candidate for nomination. During his tenure of office he had endeavored to conduct himself with the dignity befitting the office, and he did not believe there was any impropriety in speaking of himself at this time; in saying that he was a Republican and proud to be a Republican and that in the past he had been more or less active in political circles. But in view of his present position he must retrogress from his former political activity. However, appearing before this representative body of Republicans, he felt free to say that he was seeking their assistance in bringing about his nomination and if he were selected he would ask their assistance in bringing about his election, and if elected he trusted his career would be such as never to cause the slightest regret on the part of anybody that he had helped in the election.

Judge Rosch's remarks were listened to with close attention and at their close he was warmly applauded. He left the convention after speaking in order to keep his luncheon appointment with the Kiwanis Club at 1 o'clock.

Convention Roll Adopted.

The roll of delegates as prepared by John W. Eckert, secretary of the county committee, as read by him and on motion of Harcourt J. Pratt of Highland was adopted as the roll of the convention. With the exception of changes of initials in the names of delegates and the names of delegates from the second district of the Seventh ward of Kingston, the list of delegates adopted is the same as the list published elsewhere in The Freeman.

Seventeen New Committeemen.

Chairman Elting announced that under the election law members of the county committee must be elected at the September primary, and it had been the rule in the Republican committee in Ulster county for delegates attending the county convention to name the candidate for committeemen to be voted for at the September primary.

The roll of election districts was called by Secretary Eckert and the committeemen from each district named the candidate for party position for committeemen of such district at the September primary.

Sixteen changes of committeemen were recommended by the delegates, with one new committeeman from the town of Shawangunk due to the creation of a new election district there.

The changes in committeeman announced were as follows:

Esopus, fifth district—Frederick Vogt in place of Isaac G. Houghtaling.

Wawarsing, eighth district—Benjamin C. West in place of Chester Young.

Kingston city, Seventh ward, first district—Albert Vogel in place of Charles E. Bishop.

At 1:20 o'clock the convention recessed until 2:30 o'clock. Delegates were entertained at dinner at The Stuyvesant Hotel as guests of the County Committee.

MRS. HARRISON NOW IN BERLIN

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Berlin, Aug. 4.—U. S. Senator Joseph France, of Maryland, who has just arrived here from Riga, predicted today that the Moscow soviet government will weather the storm which has been thrown around it by plague and famine. He said he did not believe Lenine would fall.

Mrs. Marguerite Harrison, of Baltimore, whose release from a Russian prison was effected by Senator France, while he was in Moscow, and who accompanied the senator from Riga, is under the care of a physician. Fortunately her family doctor from Baltimore, Dr. Hugh Young, happened to be in Berlin when Mr. Harrison arrived here. She is now under his care at the Adlon Hotel.

Mrs Harrison is run down from undernourishment while in prison, but her condition is not serious and the physician said that good care and plenty of healthful food would soon restore her to normal condition.

Both Senator France and Mrs Harrison will sail for America upon the steamship Rotterdam on August 17.

Senator France looked worn and said he was suffering greatly from fatigue. He was averse to giving an interview, but when asked what effect famine and cholera would have upon the stability of the Lenine government and was told of the rumor that Lenine was already tottering, he replied:

"On the contrary common necessity seems to have had a tremendously unifying force in consolidating the Russian people of all convictions behind the Moscow government Among those giving aid are even Czarists who previously had refused to work Now they are co-operating."

Senator France was told at Moscow and Riga that about 25 per cent of the tillable soil of Russia was blighted by drouth, but a considerable amount of it was not under cultivation so that the real productivity effected is between 7 and 10 per cent. Senator France was told that if it had not been for the long dry spell Russia would not only have had enough grain for her own use but would have had some left over for export.

About 10,000,000 Russians are affected by the famine. Asked what he would do when he reached Washington the senator replied:

"I have not made any plans. I can only say that I have pressing personal affairs in the United States that need my attention."

Mrs. Harrison will be able to leave Berlin tomorrow. In addition to Dr. Young, she was examined by a Berlin specialist.

CARUSO FUNERAL HELD IN NAPLES

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Naples, Aug. 4.—The most impressive funeral services Naples has known in modern times occurred today when the late Enrico Caruso was buried amidst the lamentations of the grief stricken populace.

A tremendous crowd attended the last rites, including prominent persons who had come from various parts of Italy and even from Paris. That the singer was really the idol of the Neapolitan populace was made plain by the evidences of grief on every hand.

King Victor Emmanuel had suggested funeral services in the basilica of the Cathedral of San Francesco de Paola and it was in that historic edifice that the funeral services were conducted, according to the liturgy of the Roman Catholic Church.

Caruso's body had been lying in state in the death room of the Vesuvius Hotel since Wednesday morning. The plan to put it on public view on the stage of a local theater was not put into effect.

Richard W. Child, the American ambassador, has sent a message of condolence to Mrs. Caruso expressing not only his personal sympathy but that of the United States.

Mrs. Caruso has not yet made plans to retun to New York, as there are a number of technicalities concerning the estate to be fixed up.

Unofficial Gathering of Representatives of the Party to Nominate Candidates to be Supported at the Official Primaries for County and City Offices.

The unofficial Republican county convention met at the court house today, and after organizing and listening to a brief address from Supreme Court Justice Joseph A. Rosch of Monticello, recessed at 1:15 o'clock for dinner, to reconvene at 2 30 o'clock.

The convention was called to order at 12:45 o'clock by County Chairman Philip Elting, who introduced Judge Rosch, who came to Kingston to be the luncheon guest of the Kiwanis Club. He had prevailed on Judge Rosch, he said, to appear before the convention in order that he might be known. Upon the election of Judge Chase to the court of appeals bench, he said, the governor had appointed Judge Rosch to serve until the end of the current year. It had been agreed that he would be the Republican candidate this fall to succeed himself and it was proper that he should be known to the people of the district.

Judge Rosch's Address.

Judge Rosch said that inasmuch as he was in Kingston, he had been prevailed on to present himself at this convention at least for inspection by those to whom he might otherwise appear as a stranger.

In January, said Judge Rosch, he had been appointed justice of the supreme court for this district. The term of his appointment was a somewhat temporary one and it was necessary for him to present himself to the people this fall as a candidate for election.

Occupying the position he did, he did not think it necessary to enter upon a discussion of political questions or policies. On the other hand, he did not wish anyone to think he was so well satisfied with himself that it was unnecessary to appear in public.

The convention now assembled, he said, would recommend delegates to be elected to the judicial district convention before which he would be a candidate for nomination. During his tenure of office he had endeavored to conduct himself with the dignity befitting the office, and he did not believe there was any impropriety in speaking of himself at this time; in saying that he was a Republican and proud to be a Republican and that in the past he had been more or less active in political circles. But in view of his present position he must retrogress from his former political activity. However, appearing before this representative body of Republicans, he felt free to say that he was seeking their assistance in bringing about his nomination and if he were selected he would ask their assistance in bringing about his election, and if elected he trusted his career would be such as never to cause the slightest regret on the part of anybody that he had helped in the election.

Judge Rosch's remarks were listened to with close attention and at their close he was warmly applauded. He left the convention after speaking in order to keep his luncheon appointment with the Kiwanis Club at 1 o'clock.

Convention Roll Adopted.

The roll of delegates as prepared by John W. Eckert, secretary of the county committee, as read by him and on motion of Harcourt J. Pratt of Highland was adopted as the roll of the convention With the exception of changes of initials in the names of delegates and the names of delegates from the second district of the Seventh ward of Kingston, the list of delegates adopted is the same as the list published elsewhere in The Freeman.

Seventeen New Committeemen.

Chairman Elting announced that under the election law members of the county committee must be elected at the September primary, and it had been the rule in the Republican committee in Ulster county for delegates attending the county convention to name the candidate for committeemen to be voted for at the September primary.

The roll of election districts was called by Secretary Eckert and the committeemen from each district named the candidate for party position for committeemen of such district at the September primary.

Sixteen changes of committeemen were recommended by the delegates, with one new committeeman from the town of Shawangunk due to the creation of a new election district there.

The changes in committeeman announced were as follows:

Esopus, fifth district—Frederick Vogt in place of Isaac G. Houghtaling.

At 1:20 o'clock the convention recessed until 2:30 o'clock. Delegates were entertained at dinner at The Stuyvesant Hotel as guests of the County Committee.

ON-A-JOB, OFF-A-JOB JIM!

Being a Story

Overhearing Si Brackett's complaints regarding the illness of his assistant, Jim introduced himself as an able substitute, and was ushered into the suburban general store.

"I've worked up this business by frugality and economy," Si Brackett explained. "Never waste, always save! See that bit of string there? Pick it up. We will use it on the next bundle. That's my policy. Suppose you get busy and make out that pile of bills while there's a lull in the trade."

Little Mary came in just then for a lollypops. Jim picked out the two largest. "You mustn't do that! Mary wouldn't dare to kick, so you ought to have given her the small ones," cautioned Brackett as Jim retreated to the desk.

For over ten minutes Mr. Brackett was busy, displaying to Mrs. Jones every bolt of gingham in the store. "Are you quite sure you've shown me everything you have?" she asked at last.

"No, madam," Brackett replied irritably. "Look up Mrs. Jones's account in the ledger, Jim. There's an old bill there I'd like to show you."

"Which reminds me," exclaimed old Mr. Hicks, as the woman fled, "I can't pay you my bill today, Brackett."

"It's been running a long time."

"All the more reason why you should give it a rest," mumbled Hicks, as he slammed the door.

"Done!" Jim rose and stretched. "Next?"

"Did you charge Mr. Hicks for that pound of tea he just bought?"

"Yes. I wrote it down—I'm pretty sure I did."

"If you're only pretty sure, charge him over again. There's an awful lot of useless artices placed on the market," he continued gloomily. "Take that cough medicine up there. It's a waste of good money investing in that stuff."

"Doesn't it cure coughs?"

"Sure it cures coughs. I didn't take any more than a quarter of a bottle and my cough was gone. There was the other three-quarters just thrown away. Now look at that fly," he made a dash at the sugar barrel and waved away the fly that was just settling down to a sweet repast. "Got to keep your eyes open in this business."

"You didn't that time," smiled Jim. "Think of the sugar you let that fly carry away on his feet. You ought to have brushed them off before letting it go."

"Say! You'd make an Andrew Carnegie look like a babe in swaddling clothes. Ought to be a lesson to me to keep a piece of cloth over that there barrel. I bet I lose a lot of sugar having it open."

At the close of the second day Brackett was loath to let Jim depart. He even offered an extra quarter as an inducement but Jim said, "Nay." His eyes twingling with merriment, he filled his pockets with cookies and candy. At the further end of the street the village youngsters awaited his arrival.

"Here's to Si Brackett! May he live to repeat this day," he cried, and the smacking lips of the children seconded and carried the motion.

SUMMER WRAP

ite and Black Combination for Picturesque Cape.

ndarin Sleeves in Exaggerated Form Take Away From Graceful Outline of Figure.

The recent race meetings at Longmps have been specially brilliant, tes a Paris fashion correspondent. as been interesting, and not a litextraordinary, to note the promilce of black and white effects. It really true that, amongst the best ssed women, nine in ten wore black, ite or the two mixed.

One picturesque cape especially was atly admired. The important point s the wide scarf collar turned back th embroidered silk. A splendid ef- was obtained by the most simple thods and nothing could be more aceful than the way in which the arf collar was thrown over one oulder.

It is the day of picturesque wraps. ese garments are worn on all sorts occasions, in the afternoon as well evening. On coats and wraps one ds very wide "mandarin" sleeves.

It must be confessed that the manrin sleeve in exaggerated form kes away from the graceful outline the feminine figure; this is specialthe case when a s' f 1830 outne is adopted.

When autumn sets in we shall find eeves of uncommon, often very ecntric, design fashionable. This will a pity, but I am afraid it is invitable. I have already seen adance models for autumn wear which nd extraordinary sleeves, some of hem fringed down the under seam rom elbow to wrist, others arranged n a series of graduated panels. The set in" sleeve is an accomplished fact. It is to be seen on shirtwaists and also on casaquin blouses.

TO OPPOSE LONG, FULL SKIRT

Women of England Band Together to Protest Introduction of Objectionable Fashion.

In England, observes a fashion writer, quite a number of influential women have banded together to protest against the introduction of "long, full skirts." They say—and with much reason—that this fashion has nothing to recommend it, that full skirts which reach the ankles make every woman who wears them look years older than is necessary and also that long skirts are dust-catchers and for that reason unhygienic.

The fact is that nearly every woman realizes that she looks smarter and younger in a moderately short skirt which falls in straight lines. I do not mean exaggeratedly short, indeed, a straight skirt may quite well reach the ankles, especially if it happens to be plaited; but when it comes to gathered or flounced dresses, not to speak of those models which are obviously supported by hoops, it is another affair.

In Paris we talk a great deal about "long and full skirts," but at all the fashionable race meetings and summer festivities the straight outline still prevails.

I think we shall find that the 1830 outline will be largely exploited on the stage and at certain evening entertainments but that it will not easily replace the becoming straight-outline for street wear. I am encouraged in this opinion by the determined stand now being taken by the best Paris tailors.

All the latest models designed in their studios show straight, moderately short and wide skirts, and these are very successfully combined with shaped coats which almost reach the knees.

Purple Sport Clothes.

The run of late on sport hats of various purple hues is held by fashion authorities to be due to the fact that much of the season's sport clothing of tweeds, homespuns and other rough weaves has distinct tinges of purple, even though those shades may not stand out prominently at first glance.

Rough Collar.

Many people are troubled with a sawlike roughness at the edge of the collar that has paid many visits to the laundry. Rub the edge with a piece of paraffin wax and the collar can be worn with comfort. The wax does not soil the collar.

CHANGE MADE FOR TOURISTS

Even that sedate, historic pile, the Museum of the Louvre, has not escaped the effects of the "preparation" which all Paris has been undergoing for the reception of the American tourist. It was decided some time ago that the old method of hanging the pictures according to their merits and according to the lighting effect desired was too haphazard and too prone to confuse the visitor who was unfamiliar with the old works, their period and school. Some one suggested "standardization." There was a howl from the French press, which shrank from the thought of touching even a picture cord in the famous gallery, but the thought was advanced that if the coming thousands of American visitors to Paris were to properly enjoy the pictures they should be properly classified according to their period and school. This has been done, and now one passes through the big rooms as one might a department store. Here are works of the early Italian painters, here those of the Italian renaissance, there those of the early Flemish school and there the products of early Spanish genius. The Louvre, of course, is a sacred rite. Now it's a rite simplified, standardized and somewhat stereotyped. Some pictures which require strong light are almost in the dark, and others which would benefit by a somber surrounding suffer a glare. The guide calls this a "systeme American." Despite it the Louvre remains a rare treat.—World Traveler.

TURK LOSING HOLD IN EUROPE

Those who were in hopes that Turkey might take herself, "bag and baggage, out of everything" and have seen a setback to their hopes in the Sevres revision, can cheer up a bit by looking at the map, says the Christian Science Monitor. The chart of the Ottoman empire as it has existed since 1686 presents, indeed, a hopeful sight. The empire slowly and surely has been going back to first things. The crumbling began in 1699, when Transylvania, Slovakia and a chunk of Poland and Hungary were lost. The Banat went in 1717, the Bukovina in 1775, the Taurida and the Crimea in 1783, and the Odessa district in 1792. The next century was even more disastrous for Turkey, who lost Bessarabia in 1812, a part of Serbia in 1817, Georgia and Greece in 1829, Algeria in 1830, Bulgaria in 1876, northern Armenia, Rumania and more of Serbia in 1878, Tunisia and some of Greece in 1881, and Egypt in 1882. Nor has the present century been behind its predecessor. Libya was a great loss in 1912, following the annexation by Austria in 1908 of Bosnia and Herzegovina; 1913 proved particularly unfortunate for the Turks in the Balkans, and last year there slipped from their grasp the Hedjaz, Mesopotamia, Syria, Palestine, the strips along the Persian gulf, Smyrna and some of Armenia. It is a tale of consistent disaster.

It Was Up to Her.

A woman had just been hurt and carried into the drug store when the girl reporter dashed up. She gathered the particulars from one who had witnessed the accident and then went after details. First came the woman's name. She asked several persons and then a man who had been listening to her questions said irritably. "Oh, you curious women! Why don't you wait until tonight. We can read all about it in the paper then."

"No you can't," she returned hotly, "not unless I find out and write it."—Exchange.

Made Pathway in Desert.

Wire mesh is stated to have given quite surprising results in the construction of military roads. In Egypt, loose sand was smoothed, then chicken wire was fastened down over it, and the road so consolidated proved to be easily passable for troops and motor transports. The damage was slight, though after the passing of animal-drawn vehicles much repairing was necessary.

NOT ORIGINAL "MARK TWAIN"

Samuel Clemens Was Second Writer to Make Use of World-Famous Nom de Plume.

No lesser authority than Albert Bigelow Paine, in a recent publication, comes forward with the advice that there were two "Mark Twains"; that Capt. Isaiah Sellers, a river steamboat captain, contributing paragraphs to the New Orleans newspapers, usually signed himself "Mark-Twain."

According to Mr. Paine, the articles of Capt. Sellers often began: "My opinion for the citizens of New Orleans," etc., and would prophesy river conditions and recite incidents and comparisons dating as far back as 1811. To the younger pilots on the Mississippi, among them Samuel Clemens, then 23 years old, the articles of Capt. Sellers afforded much amusement. In an attempt to further this amusement, Samuel Clemens wrote a preposterous story of a cruise he was supposed to have made in the year 1763, the ship's crew being Choctaws and the captain a Chinaman. The story was satirical of the writing of Capt. Sellers and was thought to have much literary value. Upon the insistence of one of his friends Clemens permitted the article to be published in the True Delta in May, 1859. Capt. Sellers never wrote again for the newspapers—his literary pride had been wounded.

The nom de plume, "Mark Twain," lay idle for nearly four years. It appeared again, revived by Samuel Clemens, signed to a political letter in the Virginia City (Nev.) Enterprise on February 2, 1863. Shortly after that time it was always signed to the works of Samuel Clemens. Clemens is said to have revived the name because of his deep regret for having so thoughtlessly wounded the feelings of Capt. Sellers.

Largest English Walnut Tree.

What is declared to be the largest English walnut tree in California is boasted of by Sonora. Measurements showed the tree to be 79 feet tall, having a branch spread of 80 feet, and nine feet from the ground it was found to be three and one-half feet in circumference. Its age is unknown to residents there, but the oldest inhabitant declares it to be as old as himself.

This is only one of a series of celebrated trees. On William Lewis' ranch is a cherry tree over 50 years old which is still producing well. An enormous Bleinheim apricot tree on the D. W. Scofield place, aged over 60 years, still bears some fruit. On the Abbot ranch is an apple orchard past the century mark, which in 1919, according to the ranch owner, yielded approximately one ton to the tree.

A winesap, also over the 60—year mark, produced 2,200 pounds of apples in the same year. A Bartlett pear tree, half a century old, bore nearly a ton of good pears in 1919. To cap the senile producers, one vineyardist declared he has some 60-year-old vineyards producing over 10 tons to an acre.

Indians Built of Stone.

Ruins which are held by archaeologists to be the forerunners of the Pueblo cliff dwellings have been excavated and explored in the Texas Panhandle by W. W. K. Moorehead, director of an expedition sent out by the University of Pennsylvania. Professor Moorehead believes that the Indians in the Canadian and Cimarron valleys were the first to desert the buffalo tepee for stone construction. Later these housing pioneers, in his opinion, moved west, and built their famous cliff dwellings in the Colorado River valley and other parts of the Rocky mountains.

The expedition has worked through four counties in northwest Texas and several counties in Oklahoma, and has observed about one hundred stone foundations, usually in groups of a dozen or more, but situated in almost inaccessible canyons and wild places. The foundations range from three to five feet deep and apparently supported structures very much like the Mexican adobes of today.—Detroit News.

TOLD OF H. C. L. IN HEAVEN

Paris.—Because of her readiness to believe that even in heaven the cost of living had become a serious problem a certain faithful French widow came near being defrauded the other day. Since the death of her husband this woman had made it a rule to make a daily visit to his grave in the Pere Lachaise Cemetery. But one day while placing flowers on the mound she was startled by hearing a voice.

"Up here," the voice called out, "It is the same as upon the earth—everybody wants money. On every hand are people asking for tips. Dear friend, can you let me have 500 francs?"

Having no money with her the woman after struggling to overcome her fear promised to bring some as soon as possible and the voice replied gratefully: "Thank you."

The woman went home and told a neighbor of her remarkable experience. The neighbor thought a while and then advised the widow to do what the voice had requested, but the neighbor also went to the authorities and let them in on the secret.

Gathering together the necessary 500 francs the widow piously placed the money on the grave in a purse and went away. When she was out of sight a young man stepped out from behind a nearby tombstone and took up the purse. But the next thing he knew a policeman had him by the collar.

It turned out that the young man was a nephew of the widow, but at the trial that followed she forgave him and withdrew the charges when the young man's wife with a baby in her arms appealed to the widow for mercy.

CUSTER'S LAST STAND AGAIN

Thrilling Scene Is Re-Enacted on Battlefield on Anniversary of the Massacre.

Billings, Mont.—On the forty-fifth anniversary of the massacre of George A. Custer and his little band of 70 United States cavalrymen, the battle scene of "Custer's Last Stand" was re-enacted on the site of the engagement with the Indians.

Between 4,000 and 5,000 persons witnessed the sham battle, in which Crow Indians took the part of the Sioux, Cheyenne and Blackfeet warriors, and American Legion men and United States troopers represented Custer's forces.

Curley, White-Man-Runs-Him and Harry Moccasin, three scouts who were with Custer up to a short time before the battle, took part, leading the Legion men up to the point where they were to meet Major Reno with reinforcements. The battle lasted but a few minutes, and shotguns were used by both sides.

Yellow Fever Cultures Made.

Vera Cruz.—Cultures of the germs, which, according to Dr. Hideyo Noguchi, cause yellow fever, have been made by Doctors Mauro, Loyo, Solorzano and Morfin, of this city, who have been treating yellow fever patients in the sanitary camp near here. The cultures were made from blood taken from the veins of a patient after the sixth day of the malady. The doctors have notified Doctor Noguchi of their discovery, which may be of great importance in combating yellow fever.

$1,000 Each if They Live.

Chicago.—There are many ways of making a living beside publishing a newspaper, some easier and some harder. A Chicago hospital has found no difficulty in persuading 12 persons on behalf of the advancement of science and $70 apiece to have a swab covered with scarlet fever germs shoved down their throats to see if it will "take" and to discover a preventive serum. If it "takes" these job holders are to receive $1,000 each, in

Of how Jim got on a job and why he got off it again.

Overhearing Si Brackett's complaints regarding the illness of his assistant, Jim introduced himself as an able substitute, and was ushered into the suburban general store.

"I've worked up this business by frugality and economy," Si Brackett explained "Never waste, always save! See that bit of string there? Pick it up We will use it on the next bundle That's my policy. Suppose you get busy and make out that pile of bills while there's a lull in the trade."

Little Mary came in just then for a lollypops Jim picked out the two largest "You mustn't do that" Mary wouldn't dare to kick, so you ought to have given her the small ones," cautioned Brackett as Jim retreated to the desk.

For over ten minutes Mr. Brackett was busy displaying to Mrs. Jones every bolt of gingham in the store "Are you quite sure you've shown me everything you have?" she asked at last

"No, madam," Brackett replied irritably "Look up Mrs. Jones's account in the ledger, Jim. There's an old bill there I'd like to show you"

"Which reminds me," exclaimed old Mr Hicks, as the woman fled, "I can't pay you my bill today, Brackett"

"It's been running a long time."

"All the more reason why you should give it a rest," mumbled Hicks, as he slammed the door.

"Done!" Jim rose and stretched "Next?"

"Did you charge Mr Hicks for that pound of tea he just bought?"

"Yes I wrote it down—I'm pretty sure I did."

"If you're only pretty sure, charge him over again. There's an awful lot of useless artices placed on the market," he continued gloomily "Take that cough medicine up there It's a waste of good money investing in that stuff."

"Doesn't it cure coughs?"

"Sure it cures coughs I didn't take any more than a quarter of a bottle and my cough was gone There was the other three-quarters just thrown away. Now look at that fly," he made a dash at the sugar barrel and waved away the fly that was just settling down to a sweet repast. "Got to keep your eyes open in this business."

"You didn't that time," smiled Jim. "Think of the sugar you let that fly carry away on his feet. You ought to have brushed them off before letting it go."

"Say! You'd make an Andrew Carnegie look like a babe in swaddling clothes. Ought to be a lesson to me to keep a piece of cloth over that there barrel. I bet I lose a lot of sugar having it open."

At the close of the second day Brackett was loath to let Jim depart. He even offered an extra quarter as an inducement but Jim said, "Nay." His eyes twingling with merriment, he filled his pockets with cookies and candy. At the further end of the street the village youngsters awaited his arrival.

"Here's to Si Brackett! May he live to repeat this day," he cried, and the smacking lips of the children seconded and carried the motion.

AMUSEMENTS A SAFEGUARD.

Is a city a safer place for youth, in a moral sense, than a small town or village? This question is suggested by the remarks attributed to a resident of a small New Jersey town, the mother-in-law of a young man figuring in an elopement scandal. "The villages," this woman is quoted, "are not what they used to be in my day—what with automobiles, home-brew and even cabarets. It's enough to ruin any young man. In the city a man has to work to keep going, but in the small town he's got plenty of time to figure out some devilment." Her complaint seems to be that the small town is now too much like the city in the variety of its amusements, but it may be questioned whether the likeness is as marked as is desirable. The small town or village youth who is obliged to look for ways to kill time is more readily a prey to temptation than the city youth who finds so much more to occupy his time in his leisure hours.

This view of the matter is well worthy of the attention of those misguided reformers who are seeking to limit rather than to expand the opportunities for harmless recreation within reach of the young. They would close up the movies, stop dancing and even place restrictions upon athletic sports, and yet if they had their way they would force the youth of their neighborhood to "figure out some devilment" in order to exercise their faculties and pass the time. The truly enlightened reformer, desirous to safeguard the young on the moral side, will work for the multiplication of wholesome amusements rather than to abolish them or limit their number.

CULTURE AT DINNER TIME.

Now that women have the ballot, Mrs. Percy V. Pennypacker of Texas thinks they ought to strive for and secure a higher standard of conversation at the dinner table. Voting women should have an intellectual interest in politics and great national affairs should be discussed in the home in a way "to disseminate the right angle of thought" where now the unenlightened or purely partisan angle is the rule. Not that she would confine table talk to an illuminating discussion of politics, her aim being refined and uplifting themes in general, the women helping to draw the men away from prosaic business affairs and maintaining an atmosphere of culture at meal times.

Apparently the local reception given this worthy project is less favorable than it deserves. The Dallas News, for example, remarks that if the recitation of extracts from papers read at women's clubs should become a feature at social dinners the results will not be quite what is desired. It suggests that when he dines the tired business man's chief interest is his dinner and "the intrusion of anything bordering on hard thinking would be intrusion indeed." Mrs. Pennypacker might reply that these are not the barbaric days when Mrs. Trollope and Charles Dickens wrote of America's habit of bolting its dinner in gloomy silence; we have improved or ought to have improved since then. She and her associate reformers would do well, however, to avoid preliminary trumpet blowing and push their campaign in a discreetly quiet or unaggressive manner. They are more likely to charm, interest and lead their men to higher levels of talk at dinner if they do not scare them in advance.

Are ships flying the British or any other foreign flag free to float around outside the three-mile limit and sell thousands of cases of whiskey and gin to the launches flocking out to them from our prohibition shores? Washington may be forced to ask this question of London if the said performances along the Jersey coast continue to add to the gayety of nations in general and to the profits of forehanded subjects of one nation in particular.

An eagle, "so large that while flying high it was mistaken for an aeroplane," tried to carry off a child in its great talons at Homestead, Pa., but Mrs. George Williams happened to be in a near-by berry patch, bravely gave battle with her bucket, and the great monster was ingloriously defeated. One of those hot-weather stories that got by.

Apparently the enforcement officers have not yet had time to give much attention to Porto Rico, where, according to recent report, 10,000 illicit liquor stills are in operation. At the same rate the population of New York city would be found operating 40,000 stills.

By airplane from London to Paris costs only $10 more than by rail, and the sky-line does a good business. The airplane line from New York to Atlantic City seems also to have concluded that getting business is worth while, for it has reduced its charge from $100 to $50.

Can You Answer These Questions?

1. Please name a bird common on marshy places, apparently of the blackbird family, but it has a great deal of white about it, and a dirty yellow cap. It sings beautifully, usually on the wing.

2. Can caterpillars, moths and butterflies, hear, or make sounds?

3. Is a tadpole a fish?

Answers in Tomorrow's Nature Notes

Answers to Previous Questions.

1. Can horses and mules open their mouths after closing their teeth on an object? As in the case of mules seen to catch a chicken by the head and swing it until the head would come off, apparently unable to let go.

We know of nothing structural in the teeth of equines to explain any such performance, and have never witnessed the latter. A mule or horse vicious enough to snatch a chicken might hold on just through temper.

2. Kindly explain the meaning of dog days. Is the water poisonous to bathe in during these days?

Dog days occur during July and August, when the constellation Canis major is in the ascendant. The Dog Star, chief of the constellation, follows the sun each day. At this season certain water algae, or tiny plants, are at their rankest, and possibly the messy appearance they give the water might account for the theory of the water being poisonous.

3. Kindly advise what to feed a tame crow on. Is it harmful to give bones?

Crows are practically omnivorous, and eat carrion as well as fresh food. Try meat scraps, toads, frogs, salamanders, grasshoppers, beetles, tomatoes, beets, grain, etc. Marrow bones cracked open are all right. More animal than vegetable food is required, and a vegetable meal must be ampler than an animal one. Young crows need at least half their own weight in food daily to hold their own, and will grow when fed more liberally.

Fair At Kerhonkson.

Kerhonkson, Aug. 4.—The Reformed Church at Kerhonkson is planning for one of the biggest and best fairs and suppers ever held in the valley on Aug. 17. A hot supper will be served from 5 to 8 under the management of Chef George Davis and able assistants who are planning to feed 250 people. The church sheds will rival the county fairs, with their decorations of buntings and greens and electric lights. There will be the usual first class home made ice cream and sherberts, soft drinks, candy and the fancy work booth will have 5 quilts and a number of woven and crocheted rag rugs beside all kinds of fancy and useful articles. This is the place to stock up for X-mas gifts. The children's booth will furnish them with plenty of fun. One booth will be devoted to food products. Here you can get any kind of vegetables fresh from the graden, also jelly and canned goods, etc. There will be a well known speaker who will make an address at 4 o'clock on community work and its problems. After supper there will be an entertainment in the church, given by the Paxon family of Norristown, Pa. This will be largely of a musical nature and is guaranteed to please every taste. Don't forget the date, Wednesday, August 17.

PHOENICIA.

Phoenicia, Aug. 4.—H. Boice has presented his daughter, Verna, with a new Ford sedan, and as she is very clever in driving she and her friends enjoy a spin every now and then.

Mrs. Martha Neal of Port Ewen visited Mrs. J. Elvy recently.

Adrian P. Loomis is helper at the Shandaken station.

The Rev. McLaren and family have returned from a three weeks' vacation.

Over $500 was realized at the M. E. fair. The Aid will meet Thursday and then a full report will be given.

ACCORD CO-OP. BEGINS BUSINESS

The Accord Farmers' Cooperative, Inc., has begun business. They have several straight cars of feed rolling. They will do business regularly from now on. The farmers of Accord and all the neighborhoods round about are invited to assemble at the Methodist Church Hall at Accord, N. Y., Friday evening, August 5, 1921, to make known their feed needs, to talk over the feed business and to make up orders for several cars of feed. Let every poultryman and dairyman come out. Let's everyone get behind our farmers' organization and back it up. Now is a good time to buy feed. Now is a good time to make things go. If you are a feed buyer and user it will pay you to attend this farmers' meeting.

MACHOLDT EXPLAINS.

Ninth Ward Alderman Corrects Leader's Council Report.

Alderman Macholdt has asked The Freeman to publish the following communication:

To the Editor of the Kingston Daily Freeman:

Through some mistake the Kingston Daily Leader in Wednesday morning's issue stated that Alderman Macholdt offered in the common council a resolution which advocated putting the matter of the elimination of the West Shore crossing at Broadway up to the voters of the city at the coming election and that "his work" would entail an expense against the taxpayers of approximately of $125,000. The casual reader of the article would think that the cost of the referendum would be $125,000. The resolution offered by Alderman Macholdt was not to such effect. The $125,000 referred to in the article and in the resolution referred to the city's share of the elimination Alderman Macholdt's resolution so far as the expense of the referendum is concerned simply calls for the printing of ballots so that the people of the city may at the polls express themselves in favor of or against the elimination at the present time or in the near future.

It is clear that the only cost of the referendum would be the cost to the city of having the ballots printed, which cost in view of the short ballot that would be required and in view of the fact that the referendum would be had on the general election day would naturally be very light. I take this opportunity to correct the erroneous and undoubtedly unintentional mistake made by the Leader in Wednesday morning's issue.

Very truly yours,
HENRY MACHOLDT,
Alderman 9th Ward.

A Street Nuisance.

There is one public nuisance in the lower portion of the city that the police should give their attention, and that is the crowd of boys who congregate daily at the corner near the Rhinecliff ferry and pester people with "Shine your shoes, boss," "Let me carry your satchel," etc. These boys annoy people passing that way by splashing water about from the public fountain on the corner and cursing and fighting among themselves. Such scenes are of frequent occurrence and are simply disgraceful. The hoodlums are allowed to run the streets wild and their depredations hurt the business of the merchants in that vicinity. Last evening they added to their list of malicious actions the carrying about the Strand the iron upright sign bearing the words, "R. R. Here." This sign they took from its stand near the edge of the curb and juggled about for a long time.

DESSERT SUGGESTIONS.

Pineapple Fluff.—Line glass sherbet cups with thin slices of sponge cake, moistened with pineapple juice. Beat one cupful of heavy cream, add one well-beaten egg and a cupful of powdered sugar with a cupful of shredded pineapple to which a tablespoonful of lemon juice has been added. A spoonful of bright, fresh berries added to each cup makes a most attractive dessert.

Frozen Plum Pudding.—Scald a pint of milk and when hot pour over three well beaten egg-yolks; add a cupful of sugar and cook over hot water until the mixture coats the spoon; strain and flavor with melted chocolate. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs and one cupful of whipped cream. Prepare the fruit to be used, steaming the raisins and currants and adding shredded citron after soaking for two hours in orange juice. Freeze as usual.

Sour Cream Pie.—Beat the yolks of four eggs until light and creamy, add a cupful of sugar, the same of chopped raisins and sour cream, with one-fourth teaspoonful of cloves. Place in a double boiler and cook until smooth and thick. Line a pie plate with rich pastry and bake the crust. Fill with the mixture, cover with a meringue, using the whites of the eggs mixed with four tablespoonfuls of sugar. Heap roughly over the top and place in the oven to brown lightly.

A delightful dessert, so easy to prepare if a baked pastry shell is ready, is made by heaping the shell with any sugared fresh fruit. Cover with sweetened whipped cream; chill and serve.

Chop Suey With Liver.—Take calf's liver cut into small cubes, fry in a little butter until nearly cooked brown; add a little water from time to time and cook for half an hour; add a cupful of chopped onion and celery and cook fifteen minutes. Season with salt, pepper and two teaspoonfuls of figi sauce. Serve hot with hot cooked rice.

GIRL SCOUT CAMP NEWS

The Girl Scout camp has completed its fourth successful week. The council feels amply repaid for their efforts. The camp leader, Mrs. O'Loughlin, has been all the more than the council anticipated. Mrs. Daley, who has charge of the cooking, has lived up to her city and county-wide reputation. The girls have appreciated and greatly benefited by this extraordinary opportunity of spending a vacation in one of the most healthful localities of the Catskills at the exceedingly low figure of $6.50 per week.

The council feels gratified by the indorsement of the many parents who have visited the camp while their daughters were there. A mother who visited the camp this week told one of the council members that the camp was greatly benefiting her daughter in many ways. All of the reports from parents have been similar.

Since July 13 the camp has been completely filled and will be until August 10. The week of August 10 there are several vacancies and beginning August 17 there is plenty of room. The last two weeks of August were saved for employed girls but the response has not been good, probably from the fact that most girls had already arranged for their vacations.

We are now offering the camp opportunity to any girl, scout or otherwise, in Kingston or Ulster county.

The Girl Scout organization is nonsectarian and the camp has been so carried on. There is a Catholic Church at Phoenicia and at a small charge some of the girls, who wished to, have gone by auto to church under the chaperonage of Mrs. Daley. Some of the Protestant girls have also gone to church. There have been a number of Jewish girls in camp. There is a very interesting group of Jewish girls registered for the week of August 10. Are there other girls who would like to join this group?

The minimum age for girls has been 12 years. We find now that we can care for a few younger girls if they wish to register. The camp is so large that girls of different ages can be supervised in the same week and still have everyone happy.

Register now. It will be a vacation which will have lasting benefit. Call or telephone Miss May E. Davis, 152 Smith avenue. Telephone 1185-W.

In Police Court.

James Harrison, 22 years old, of New York city, while watching the ball game at the Athletic Field Wednesday afternoon saw some other men in one of the coaches on the West Shore tracks and after the game joined them. As night fell he felt sleepy and as he was without money he decided the coach would afford an ideal sleeping berth. He was found asleep by Officers Murphy and Fatum. Judge Schirick this morning gave him an hour to get out of town.

Joseph McNelis was arrested Wednesday afternoon by Officer Fout on a charge of parking his auto with the tail end sticking out into the street on Railroad avenue. As this was his first offense he was discharged by the court.

A Great Heap of Small Sticks.

Grammar being but an introduction to the understanding of authors, if it be made too long or exquisite to the learner, it in a manner mortifieth his courage. And by the time he cometh to the most sweet and pleasant reading of old authors, the spark of fervent desire of learning is extinct with the burden of grammar like as a little fire is soon quenched with a great heap of small sticks; so that it can never come to the principal logs where it should long burn in a great pleasant fire.—Sir Thomas Elyot, "The Governor" (1531).

CHICKEN THIEVES GIVEN A CHANCE

Steven Wesolowski, 18 years old, and Peter Bonofsky, 16 years old, two chicken thieves who have been helping themselves from the hen roosts of North Rondout residents, and who were rounded up by Sergeant Hanley, were arraigned in police court before Judge Schirick this morning. They were both represented by Attorney A. J. Cook, who entered a plea of guilty for them, and urged clemency.

Both boys have been in trouble before and their faces were familiar ones to Judge Schirick, but he said that he had decided to give them one more chance, and if Mr. Cook was willing he would place them on probation to report to him for a period of six months. Mr. Cook agreed and said that if the boys violated their parole he would ask the court to revoke the paroles.

Judge Schirick warned both boys that he was giving them this chance and if they did not want to be placed in institutions they had better watch their steps.

Metternich's Egotism.

Instances of Metternich's self-satisfaction are everywhere in his autobiography and his private letters; one could almost be persuaded that the great Austrian statesman and diplomat was quite fond of himself. "I judge of the Revolution more truly than most men who have been in the midst of it," he writes. "I have to meet the German ministers, they expect me as a Messiah." "Fain's memoirs of the year 1813 are worth reading—they contain my history as well as Napoleon's." "The public journals, which do not usually pass me over, follow me step by step." "As an instance of how right as such is acknowledged by the majority of people, I may mention the thorough confidence shown in me by all parties." In a letter describing his daughter Hermione he says, "She is very like my mother; therefore, possesses some of my charms"—Kansas City Star.

Learn to Know Words Well.

Guesswork didn't make Demosthenes or Cicero or Shakespeare a word master. As one who has given his best efforts to teach men the right use of words, says: "Milton, mighty magician of majestic prose, under whose wonderful touch words became charmed and electrified; Flaubert, who believed that there was one and only one best word with which to express a given idea; De Quincey, with his weird power over words, and Lincoln, of simple Saxon speech—these illustrious men were assiduous in their study of words." For that matter, study words carefully if only to increase your conversational power. The greater your knowledge of words, the wider your range of thought will be and the easier you will find it to converse on any subject.—H. Addington Bruce in Chicago Daily News.

Ancient Usee of Fire.

Fireworks, as we know them today, remarks London Answers, were not known to antiquity, but the ancients employed works of fire in connection with their religious festivals. The early monarchs of Asia, according to Herodotus, commanded that ensigns of fire, considered holy and eternal, should be carried at the head of their armies on little altars of silver. Fire was used by the Romans in their religious rejoicings; but the Greeks introduced illuminations. Lighted lamps were held at a certain feast in honor of Minerva, who gave them oil; of Vulcan, their inventor of lamps; and of Prometheus, who was said to have rendered them service by the fire which he had stolen from heaven.

Bamboo Serves All Purposes.

The first thing a farmer does in China is to plant round three sides at least of the site of his house a bamboo fence or grove, the second to cut it down gradually, and therefrom make every conceivable thing he may want, from the house itself down to his fan, opium-pipe and chop-sticks.

REAL HUMORIST OF AMERICA

In One Writer's Opinion, the Country Editor Is Entitled to Honor of the Title.

The funniest things which are written and printed in this country are not written by Irvin Cobb or George Ade or Ring Lardner. They are not written by the professional humorist of the great newspapers.

They are written by the so-called country editors and notably by so-called country editors of Ohio and Kansas. We hardly think anyone with a real sense of humor who reads large numbers of newspapers and maguzines and modern books will dispute this assertion.

Humor is merely the ability to see and react understandingly to the mirth-provoking side of human nature, which is not the least ample of its sides. A humorous paragraph may be grossly exaggerated in its interpretation of human nature, but human nature must be somewhere down near the bottom of it or it is a failure.

This explains why humor is so much more amusing, so much more satisfying than wit. Wit needs no human nature as its foundation, it may be simply a lightning-like play on mere words, sufficient to cause a smile, a laugh perhaps, but none of the solid comfort derived by the discerning from true humor.—Ohio State Journal.

Compliment to the Mare.

Talk of automobile drivers being arrested for violating the speed limit when they fly up and down the highways at 40, 50, 60, etc., miles an hour, drew one day a bit of reminiscence from Captain Thomas E. Halls of the United States secret service.

"I remember one time back in a little Ohio town," said the captain, "when my father was stopped by an officer of the law because he was driving his mare more than 12 miles an hour."

"'You was going more than twelve miles an hour,' said the officer; 'I'll arrest you for speeding.'"

"'No, get up, get up,' my father said. 'That's a compliment to the mare. She can't go 12 miles an hour.'"—Detroit Free Press.

Cat's Meat.

The port of London authorities are spending more than $5,000 a year for cat's meat, that the large army of cats required to deal with the rats and mice infesting the docks may be supported in the style to which they have been accustomed. So presumably the cats are purely "sportsmen," just kill the rats for the fun of the thing, but never eat their prey. And also, presumably, the cats don't make much headway with their jobs, since we are assured the staff has been continually increased—and likewise the appropriations for their support. It looks like a political sinecure.—Los Angeles Times.

Many children innocently cheated out of the very food they need daily

Everycne knows that health is the most valuable asset of life. From birth to maturity is the "construction period."

A robust and healthy child will usually develop into a vigorous man or woman. But malnutrition will invariably hamper normal growth and when the child reaches maturity he or she is anemic, poorly nourished and liable to disease.

Many children today are innocently cheated out of the very foods they need. Some parents, either through lack of knowledge, or carelessness, do not provide those foods which strengthen and nourish the growing child.

It is the duty of parents to think for the child in these matters.

Grape-Nuts, the well-known food made of whole wheat flour and malted barley, served with milk or cream, is one of the most nutritious foods in the world. It provides the elements necessary to nutrition and is a balanced food.

Quite aside from its superior nutritive value, is its delicious appetite appeal. Especially attractive with fresh fruits or preserves.

Grape-Nuts is served and sold everywhere—in leading hotels and restaurants; at lunch counters; in every good grocery store in every city, town or village in the United States. Where you can't find Grape-Nuts—you won't find people.

TO OPPOSE LONG, FULL SKIRT

Women of England Band Together to Protest Introduction of Objectionable Fashion.

In England, observes a fashion writer, quite a number of influential women have banded together to protest against the introduction of "long, full skirts." They say—and with much reason—that this fashion has nothing to recommend it, that full skirts which reach the ankles make every woman who wears them look years older than is necessary and also that long skirts are dust-catchers and for that reason unhygienic.

The fact is that nearly every woman realizes that she looks smarter and younger in a moderately short skirt which falls in straight lines. I do not mean exaggeratedly short, indeed, a straight skirt may quite well reach the ankles, especially if it happens to be plaited; but when it comes to gathered or flounced dresses, not to speak of those models which are obviously supported by hoops, it is another affair.

In Paris we talk a great deal about "long and full skirts," but at all the fashionable race meetings and summer festivities the straight outline still prevails.

I think we shall find that the 1830 outline will be largely exploited on the stage and at certain evening entertainments but that it will not easily replace the becoming straight-outline for street wear. I am encouraged in this opinion by the determined stand now being taken by the best Paris tailors.

All the latest models designed in their studios show straight, moderately short and wide skirts, and these are very successfully combined with shaped coats which almost reach the knee.

Purple Sport Clothes.

The run of late on sport hats of various purple hues is held by fashion authorities to be due to the fact that much of the season's sport clothing of tweeds, homespuns and other rough weaves has distinct tinges of purple, even though these shades may not stand out prominently at first glance.

Rough Collar.

Many people are troubled with a swollen roughness at the edge of the collar that has paid many visits to the laundry. Rub the edge with a piece of paraffin wax and the collar can be worn with comfort. The wax does not soil the collar.

CHANGE MADE FOR TOURISTS

Even that sedate, historic pile, the Museum of the Louvre, has not escaped the effects of the "preparation" which all Paris has been undergoing for the reception of the American tourist. It was decided some time ago that the old method of hanging the pictures according to their merits and according to the lighting effect desired was too haphazard and too prone to confuse the visitor who was unfamiliar with the old works, their period and school. Some one suggested "standardization." There was a howl from the French press, which shrank from the thought of touching even a picture cord in the famous gallery, but the thought was advanced that if the coming thousands of American visitors to Paris were to properly enjoy the pictures they should be properly classified according to their period and school. This has been done, and now one passes through the big rooms as one might a department store. Here are works of the early Italian painters, here those of the Italian renaissance, there those of the early Flemish school and there the products of early Spanish genius. The Louvre, of course, is a sacred ... Now it's a file simplified, standardized and somewhat stereotyped. Some pictures which require strong light are almost in the dark, and others which would benefit by a sombre surrounding suffer a glare. The guide calls this a "system American." Despite it the Louvre remains a rare treat.—World Traveler.

TURK LOSING HOLD IN EUROPE

Those who were in hopes that Turkey might free herself, "bag and baggage, out of everything" and have seen a setback to their hopes in the Sevres treaty, can cheer up a bit by looking at the map, says the Christian Science Monitor. The chart of the Ottoman empire as it has existed since 1696 presents, indeed, a hopeful sight. The empire slowly and surely has been going back to first things. The crumbling began in 1699, when Transylvania, Slovakia and a chunk of Poland and Hungary were lost. The Banat went in 1717, the Bukowina in 1775, the Taurida and the Crimea in 1783, and the Odessa district in 1792. The next century was even more disastrous for Turkey, who lost Bessarabia in 1812, a part of Serbia in 1817, Georgia and Greece in 1829, Algeria in 1830, Bulgaria in 1876, northern Armenia, Rumania and more of Serbia in 1878, Tunisia and some of Greece in 1881, and Egypt in 1882. Nor has the present century been behind its predecessor. Libya was a great loss in 1912, following the annexation by Austria in 1908 of Bosnia and Herzegovina; 1913 proved particularly unfortunate for the Turks in the Balkans, and last year there slipped from their grasp the Hedjaz, Mesopotamia, Syria, Palestine, the strips along the Persian gulf, Smyrna and some of Armenia. It is a tale of consistent disaster.

It Was Up to Her.

A woman had just been hurt and carried into the drug store when the girl reporter dashed up. She gathered the particulars from one who had witnessed the accident and then went after details ... came the woman's name. She asked several persons and then a man who had been listening to her questions said irritably: "Why don't you curious women? Why don't you wait until tonight. We can read all about it in the paper then."

"No you can't," she returned hotly, "not unless I find out and write it."—Exchange.

Made Pathway in Desert.

Wire mesh is stated to have given quite surprising results in the construction of military roads in Egypt. Loose sand was smoothed. Then chicken wire was fastened down over it, and the road so consolidated proved to be easily passable for troops and motor transports. The damage was slight, though after the passing of animal-drawn vehicles much repairing was necessary.

NOT ORIGINAL "MARK TWAIN"

Samuel Clemens Was Second Writer to Make Use of World-Famous Nom de Plume.

No lesser authority than Albert Bigelow Paine, in a recent publication, comes forward with the advice that there were two "Mark Twains"; that Capt. Isaiah Sellers, a river steamboat captain, contributing paragraphs to the New Orleans newspapers, usually signed himself "Mark-Twain."

According to Mr. Paine, the articles of Capt. Sellers often began: "My opinion for the citizens of New Orleans," etc., and would prophesy river conditions and recite incidents and comparisons dating as far back as 1811. To the younger pilots on the Mississippi, among them Samuel Clemens, then 23 years old, the articles of Capt. Sellers afforded much amusement. In an attempt to further this amusement, Samuel Clemens wrote a preposterous story of a cruise he was supposed to have made in the year 1763, the ship's crew being Choctaws and the captain a Chinaman. The story was satirical of the writing of Capt. Sellers, and was thought to have much literary value. Upon the insistence of one of his friends Clemens permitted the article to be published in the True Delta in May, 1859. Capt. Sellers never wrote again for the newspapers—his literary pride had been wounded.

The nom de plume, "Mark Twain," lay idle for nearly four years. It appeared again, revived by Samuel Clemens, signed "in a political letter in the Virginia City (Nev.) Enterprise on February 2, 1863. Shortly after that time it was always signed to the works of Samuel Clemens. Clemens is said to have revived the name because of his deep regret for having so thoughtlessly wounded the feelings of Capt. Sellers.

Largest English Walnut Tree.

What is declared to be the largest English walnut tree in California is boasted of by Sonoma. Measurements showed the tree to be 73 feet tall, having a branch spread of 90 feet, and nine feet from the ground it was found [illegible] feet in circumference. Its age is unknown to residents there, but the oldest inhabitant declares it to be as old as himself.

This is only one of a series of celebrated trees. On William Lewis' ranch is a cherry tree over 50 years old which is still producing well. An enormous Bleinheim apricot tree on the D. W. Scofield place, aged over 60 years, still bears some fruit. On the Abbot ranch is an apple orchard past the century mark, which in 1919, according to the ranch owner, yielded approximately one ton to the tree.

A winesap, also over the 60—year mark, produced 2,200 pounds of apples in the same year. A Bartlett pear tree, half a century old, bore nearly a ton of good pears in 1919. To cap the senile producers, one vineyardist declared he has some 60-year-old vineyards producing over 10 tons to an acre.

Indians Built of Stone.

Ruins which are held by archaeologists to be the forerunners of the Pueblo cliff dwellings have been excavated and explored in the Texas Panhandle by W. W. K. Moorehead, director of an expedition sent out by the University of Pennsylvania. Professor Moorehead believes that the Indians in the Canadian and Cimarron valleys were the first to desert the buffalo tepee for stone construction. Later these housing pioneers, in his opinion, moved west, and built their famous cliff dwellings in the Colorado River valley and other parts of the Rocky mountains.

The expedition has worked through four counties in northwest Texas and several counties in Oklahoma, and has observed about one hundred stone foundations, usually in groups of a dozen or more but situated in almost inaccessible canyons and wild places. The foundations range from three to five feet deep and apparently supported structures very much like the Mexican adobes of today.—Detroit News.

Paris.—Because of her readiness to believe that even in heaven the cost of living had become a serious problem a certain faithful French widow came near being defrauded the other day. Since the death of her husband this woman had made it a rule to make a daily visit to his grave in the Pere Lachaise Cemetery. But one day while placing flowers on the mound she was startled by hearing a voice.

"Up here," the voice called out, "it is the same as upon the earth—everybody wants money. On every hand are people asking for tips. Dear friend, can you let me have 500 francs?"

Having no money with her the woman after struggling to overcome her fear promised to bring some as soon as possible and the voice replied gratefully: "Thank you."

The woman went home and told a neighbor of her remarkable experience. The neighbor thought a while and then advised the widow to do what the voice had requested, but the neighbor also went to the authorities and let them in on the secret.

Gathering together the necessary 500 francs the widow piously placed the money on the grave in a purse and went away. When she was out of sight a young man stepped out from behind a nearby tombstone and took up the purse. But the next thing he knew a policeman had him by the collar.

It turned out that the young man was a nephew of the widow, but at the trial that followed she forgave him and withdrew the charges when the young man's wife with a baby in her arms appealed to the widow for mercy.

CUSTER'S LAST STAND AGAIN

Thrilling Scene Is Re-Enacted on Battlefield on Anniversary of the Massacre.

Billings, Mont.—On the forty-fifth anniversary of the massacre of George A. Custer and his little band of 70 United States cavalrymen, the battle scene of "Custer's Last Stand" was re-enacted on the site of the engagement with the Indians.

Between 4,000 and 5,000 persons witnessed the sham battle, in which Crow Indians took the part of the Sioux, Cheyenne and Blackfeet warriors, and American Legion men and United States troopers represented Custer's forces.

Curley, White-Man-Runs-Him and Harry Moccasin, three scouts who were with Custer up to a short time before the battle, took part, leading the Legion men up to the point where they were to meet Major Reno with reinforcements. The battle lasted but a few minutes, and shotguns were used by both sides.

Yellow Fever Cultures Made.

Vera Cruz.—Cultures of the germ which, according to Dr. Hideyo Noguchi, cause yellow fever, have been made by Doctors Mauze, Lara, Solorzano and Morfin, of this city, who have been treating yellow fever patients in the sanitary camp near here. The cultures were made from blood taken from the veins of a patient after the sixth day of the malady. The doctors have notified Doctor Noguchi of their discovery, which may be of great importance in combating yellow fever.

$1,000 Each if They Live.

Chicago.—There are many ways of making a living beside publishing a newspaper, some easier and some harder. A Chicago hospital has found no difficulty in persuading 12 persons on behalf of the advancement of science and $1,000 apiece to have a swab covered with scarlet fever germs shoved down their throats to see if it will "take" and to discover a preventive serum. If it "takes" these job holders are to receive $1,000 each, in [illegible].

THE TRAVELING FLOWERS.

"I've a story to tell you," said Mother Nature one day to her children.

"We'd like to hear the story," said the ferns.

"So would we," said the wild flowers.

"And we would, too," said the garden flowers.

"We love to hear anything you have to tell us," said the shrubs. "What are you going to tell us today?"

"My story," said Mother Nature, "is about some traveling flowers.

"A great, great, great many years ago, oh, so many, many, many years ago, there were not so many big cities as there are now.

"There was more room everywhere and people almost all had gardens and flowers and could walk just a little distance and gather all the wild flowers they wanted.

"But the cities grew up and somehow, without meaning to, I'm sure, the flowers were pushed out of the way.

"Many of the people missed the flowers and the ferns and the shrubs and the Nature children. But they couldn't do the work they had to in the city and have gardens, too, for there wasn't any room in the city for the gardens. Some of them worked in the city and had their homes in the country, but many more had to be in the city all the time.

"And city after city grew up in just this way. Well, as I have said, the Nature children were greatly missed, though the people tried not to feel too badly about leaving the Nature children.

"They still loved the Nature children and the Nature children still loved them and understood how things were.

"Well, when the springtime came along one year, after so many cities had grown bigger and bigger and so many people had gone to live in the cities, the Nature children called me and said:

"'Dear Mother Nature, we have something to ask you.'

"'What have you to ask me?' I said and then they told me.

"'Mother Nature,' they said, 'the Dream King has told us that many, many people from the cities would be out in the country places for holidays and for week-ends this spring.

"'So we have thought up a plan. You see, the Dream King tells us that every once in a while the people get very tired from all the business they must do and all the studying they must do, too.

"'They get tired of the same old talk of business and of studying. They get tired of talking of how much rent they must pay and where they can possibly find room to store away some jam and preserves from the country, which has been sent to them.

"'They get tired of all their worries which they have. The Dream King says they have lots of fun, too, and that city life is very pleasant, but that every once in a while they long for the country and the flowers and the smell of the nice old earth and of the blossoms.

"'So we've decided we would look our very best all the time, so that when the people from the cities come out to see us they may pick some of us and take us home with them so we'll cheer them up.'

"I told them I thought their idea was wonderful. And ever since then the flowers have all looked their best and the shrubs have all looked their best and the ferns have all looked their best, so they could cheer up the city people when they were taken back after holidays.

"The Sun, too, has worn handsome suits for the people to admire. He can't be taken back with them, but he can show them his beautiful golden-edged suit and his suit of many colors, for he says they've hardly time to look at him in the cities very often.

"And the birds have sung their prettiest songs to give the city people real country holidays.

"But the flowers which have traveled to the cities have done a great, great deal to add to the holidays of the city people, and have stayed fresh and bright in the city apartments for just as long as they could.

"So when any of you are picked and carried to the cities, keep your prettiest and freshest smiles on your faces."

And they all promised Mother Nature they would.

Comparatively few people realize that the gas bills may be cut down materially by exercising care in lighting the gas. Hold a lighted match over the burner, then very slowly turn on the gas. Get Many Silly Complaints.

Every day the postmasters in the larger cities receive countless letters of complaint. Not unnaturally among so large a number there are many of a frivolous nature. For example, one woman wrote that the carrier who delivered her letters was engaged to a woman twice his own age, and requested that he should be asked to break off the engagement or be dismissed.

AMUSEMENTS A SAFEGUARD.

Is a city a safer place for youth, in a moral sense, than a small town or village? This question is suggested by the remarks attributed to a resident of a small New Jersey town, the mother-in-law of a young man figuring in an elopement scandal. "The villages," this woman is quoted, "are not what they used to be in my day—what with automobiles, home-brew and even cabarets. It's enough to ruin any young man. In the city a man has to work to keep going, but in the small town he's got plenty of time to figure out some devilment." Her complaint seems to be that the small town is now too much like the city in the variety of its amusements, but it may be questioned whether the likeness is as marked as is desirable. The small town or village youth who is obliged to look for ways to kill time is more readily a prey to temptation than the city youth who finds so much more to occupy his time in his leisure hours.

This view of the matter is well worthy of the attention of those misguided reformers who are seeking to limit rather than to expand the opportunities for harmless recreation within reach of the young. They would close up the movies, stop dancing and even place restrictions upon athletic sports, and yet if they had their way they would force the youth of their neighborhood to "figure out some devilment" in order to exercise their faculties and pass the time. The truly enlightened reformer, desirous to safeguard the young on the moral side, will work for the multiplication of wholesome amusements rather than to abolish them or limit their number.

CULTURE AT DINNER TIME.

Now that women have the ballot, Mrs. Percy V. Pennypacker of Texas thinks they ought to strive for and secure a higher standard of conversation at the dinner table. Voting women should have an intellectual interest in politics and great national affairs should be discussed in the home in a way "to disseminate the right angle of thought" where now the unenlightened or purely partisan angle is the rule. Not that she would confine table talk to an illuminating discussion of politics, her aim being refined and uplifting themes in general, the women helping to draw the men away from prosaic business affairs and maintaining an atmosphere of culture at meal times.

Apparently the local reception given this worthy project is less favorable than it deserves. The Dallas News, for example, remarks that if the recitation of extracts from papers read at women's clubs should become a feature at social dinners the results will not be quite what is desired. It suggests that when he dines the tired business man's chief interest is his dinner and "the intrusion of anything bordering on hard thinking would be intrusion indeed." Mrs. Pennypacker might reply that these are not the barbaric days when Mrs. Trollope and Charles Dickens wrote of America's habit of bolting its dinner in gloomy silence; we have improved or ought to have improved since then. She and her associate reformers would do well, however, to avoid preliminary trumpet blowing and push their campaign in a discreetly quiet or unaggressive manner. They are more likely to charm, interest and lead their men to higher levels of talk at dinner if they do not scare them in advance.

Are ships flying the British or any other foreign flag free to float around outside the three-mile limit and sell thousands of cases of whiskey and gin to the launches flocking out to them from our prohibition shores? Washington may be forced to ask this question of London if the said performances along the Jersey coast continue to add to the gayety of nations in general and to the profits of forehanded subjects of one nation in particular.

An eagle, "so large that, while flying high it was mistaken for an aeroplane," tried to carry off a child in its great talons at Homestead, Pa., but Mrs. George Williams happened to be in a near-by berry patch, bravely gave battle with her bucket, and the great monster was ingloriously defeated. One of those hot-weather stories that got by.

Apparently the enforcement officers have not yet had time to give much attention to Porto Rico, where, according to recent report, 10,000 illicit liquor stills are in operation. At the same rate the population of New York city would be found operating 40,000 stills.

By airplane from London to Paris costs only $10 more than by rail, and the sky-line does a good business. The airplane line from New York to Atlantic City seems also to have concluded that getting business is worth while, for it has reduced its charge from $100 to $50.

What do you want to know about Nature Subjects? Send any questions of general interest to the Nature Notes Department of this paper. Look for answers in this column.

Can You Answer These Questions?

1. Please name a bird common on marshy places, apparently of the blackbird family, but it has a great deal of white about it, and a dirty yellow cap. It sings beautifully, usually on the wing.

2 Can caterpillars, moths and butterflies, hear, or make sounds?

3. Is a tadpole a fish?

Answers in Tomorrow's Nature Notes

Answers to Previous Questions.

1. Can horses and mules open their mouths after closing their teeth on an object? As in the case of mules seen to catch a chicken by the head and swing it until the head would come off, apparently unable to let go.

We know of nothing structural in the teeth of equines to explain any such performance, and have never witnessed the latter. A mule or horse vicious enough to snatch a chicken might hold on just through temper.

2. Kindly explain the meaning of dog days. Is the water poisonous to bathe in during these days?

Dog days occur during July and August, when the constellation Canis major is in the ascendant. The Dog Star, chief of the constellation, follows the sun each day. At this season certain water algae, or tiny plants, are at their rankest, and possibly the messy appearance they give the water might account for the theory of the water being poisonous.

3. Kindly advise what to feed a tame crow on. Is it harmful to give bones?

Crows are practically omnivorous, and eat carrion as well as fresh food. Try meat scraps, toads, frogs, salamanders, grasshoppers, beetles, tomatoes, beets, grain, etc. Marrow bones cracked open are all right. More animal than vegetable food is required, and a vegetable meal must be ampler than an animal one. Young crows need at least half their own weight in food daily to hold their own, and will grow when fed more liberally.

Fair At Kerhonkson.

Kerhonkson, Aug. 4.—The Reformed Church at Kerhonkson is planning for one of the biggest and best fairs and suppers ever held in the valley on Aug. 17. A hot supper will be served from 5 to 8 under the management of Chef George Davis and able assistants who are planning to feed 250 people. The church sheds will rival the county fairs, with their decorations of buntings and greens and electric lights. There will be the usual first class home made ice cream and sherberts, soft drinks, candy and the fancy work booth will have 5 quilts and a number of woven and crocheted rag rugs beside all kinds of fancy and useful articles. This is the place to stock up for X-mas gifts. The children's booth will furnish them with plenty of fun. One booth will be devoted to food products. Here you can get any kind of vegetables fresh from the garden, also jelly and canned goods, etc. There will be a well known speaker who will make an address at 4 o'clock on community work and its problems. After supper there will be an entertainment in the church, given by the Paxon family of Norristown, Pa. This will be largely of a musical nature and is guaranteed to please every taste. Don't forget the date, Wednesday, August 17.

MACHOLDT EXPLAINS.

Ninth Ward Alderman Corrects Leader's Council Report.

Alderman Macholdt has asked The Freeman to publish the following communication:

Through some mistake the Kingston Daily Leader in Wednesday morning's issue stated that Alderman Macholdt offered in the common council a resolution which advocated putting the matter of the elimination of the West Shore crossing at Broadway up to the voters of the city at the coming election and that "his work" would entail an expense against the taxpayers of approximately of $125,000. The casual reader of the article would think that the cost of the referendum would be $125,000. The resolution offered by Alderman Macholdt was not to such effect. The $125,000 referred to in the article and in the resolution referred to the city's share of the elimination. Alderman Macholdt's resolution so far as the expense of the referendum is concerned simply calls for the printing of ballots so that the people of the city may at the polls express themselves in favor of or against the elimination at the present time or in the near future.

It is clear that the only cost of the referendum would be the cost to the city of having the ballots printed, which cost in view of the short-ballot that would be required and in view of the fact that the referendum would be had on the general election day would naturally be very light. I take this opportunity to correct the erroneous and undoubtedly unintentional mistake made by the Leader in Wednesday morning's issue.

Very truly yours,
HENRY MACHOLDT,
Alderman 9th Ward.

A Street Nuisance.

There is one public nuisance in the lower portion of the city that the police should give their attention, and that is the crowd of boys who congregate daily at the corner near the Rhinecliff ferry and pester people with "Shine your shoes, boss," "Let me carry your satchel," etc. These boys annoy people passing that way by splashing water about from the public fountain on the corner and cursing and fighting among themselves. Such scenes are of frequent occurrence and are simply disgraceful. The hoodlums are allowed to run the streets wild and their depredations hurt the business of the merchants in that vicinity. Last evening they added to their list of malicious actions the carrying about the Strand the iron upright sign bearing the words, "R. R. Ferry." This sign they took from its stand near the edge of the curb and juggled about for a long time.

It is never too late to begin. History is full of men and women who were failures at fifty and famous at seventy.

DESSERT SUGGESTIONS.

Pineapple Fluff.—Line glass sherbet cups with thin slices of sponge cake, moistened with pineapple juice. Beat one cupful of heavy cream, add one well-beaten egg and a cupful of powdered sugar with a cupful of shredded pineapple to which a tablespoonful of lemon juice has been added. A spoonful of bright, fresh berries added to each cup makes a most attractive dessert.

Frozen Plum Pudding.—Scald a pint of milk and when hot pour over three well beaten egg-yolks; add a cupful of sugar and cook over hot water until the mixture coats the spoon; strain and flavor with melted chocolate. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs and one cupful of whipped cream. Prepare the fruit to be used, steaming the raisins and currants and adding shredded citron after soaking for two hours in orange juice. Freeze as usual.

Sour Cream Pie.—Beat the yolks of four eggs until light and creamy, add a cupful of sugar, the same of chopped raisins and sour cream, with one-fourth teaspoonful of cloves. Place in a double boiler and cook until smooth and thick. Line a pie plate with rich pastry and bake the crust. Fill with the mixture, cover with a meringue, using the whites of the eggs mixed with four tablespoonfuls of sugar. Heap roughly over the top and place in the oven to brown lightly.

A delightful dessert, so easy to prepare if a baked pastry shell is ready, is made by heaping the shell with any sugared fresh fruit. Cover with sweetened whipped cream; chill and serve.

Chop Suey With Liver.—Take calf's liver cut into small cubes, fry in a little butter until nearly cooked brown; add a little water from time to time and cook for half an hour; add a cupful of chopped onion and celery and cook fifteen minutes. Season with salt, pepper and two teaspoonfuls of [illegible] sauce. Serve hot with hot cooked rice.

LEGION OFFICER KNOWS NAVY

Edward Spafford, Chairman of Committee on Naval Affairs, Has Climbed the Ladder.

Edward Elwell Spafford, newly appointed chairman of the American Legion's committee on naval affairs, knows the United States navy on land and on sea as few other men do.

Born in Springfield, Vt., Mr. Spafford was educated in the public schools. He received an appointment to the United States Naval academy in 1901. Assigned to the ship Washington, he became gunnery officer; at that time he was the youngest officer in the navy to hold this position.

While the Washington was lying off Cape Hatteras a sailor was washed overboard in a heavy sea. Risking his life in the waves, Mr. Spafford plunged overboard and succeeded in rescuing the seaman. His bravery was recognized in a letter of commendation from the secretary of the navy. He rose to the rank of lieutenant commander.

With the start of the war Mr. Spafford offered his services to his country and he was made a lieutenant commander in the navy reserve corps. He served for a time as a member of the board of inspection and survey, which was in charge of the selection of ships to be purchased by the government. He directed the fitting out of the first 25 110-foot submarine chasers built for distance service and established a submarine chaser base at New London, Conn.

When the American navy became active in the Straits of Otranto, Mr. Spafford was sent to establish a submarine chaser base at Corfu, Greece, and later became chief of staff of that station. He was in charge of all operations and was on the first American submarine chaser which destroyed an enemy ship after locating it by the process of sound contact.

When the Austrians surrendered two battleships and two destroyers to the United States, Lieutenant Commander Spafford took them over. Later, he investigated the situation along the Dalmatian coast and made a special report on Fiume to the American peace delegation at Paris. He received the Distinguished Service Medal. Mr. Spafford is a member of Manhattan naval post of the American Legion in New York city.

SAYS NO MAN HER SUPERIOR

Bright-Eyed Sergeant and Vice Commander of Post Bluffed Mr. Silver-Eagles.

Who else but a bright-eyed, smiling American girl could have gotten away with it?

Sergeant Minnie Arthur of the United States marine corps was on duty in a recruiting office in Indianapolis, Ind., during the war. The major in charge was nervous; a colonel from Washington was coming to inspect; everyone brushed up on rules of military conduct. In walked the austere colonel. Sergeant Arthur remained working at her desk. Silver-eagles walked over to her desk and frowned.

"Um—ever get up when an officer comes in the room, sergeant?" he growled.

"Yes, sir, sometimes," Miss Three Stripes replied.

"Um—and I suppose you salute your superiors, too, eh?"

Sergeant Arthur smiled sweetly—and then her eyes snapped.

"Sir, I've never seen a man yet who was my superior!"

And the colonel passed it off without a reprimand.

Miss Arthur, now vice-commander of Robert E. Kennington post of the American Legion in Indianapolis, enlisted for four years and served 18 months. She is still in the reserve, drawing $1 a month with which she buys hair nets. She is authority on Liberian golf and plays a good hand at "blackjack."

On the Square.

"We had quite a game up to the boarding house last night."

"Poker?"

"No. The landlady was going to lick one of the boys for not paying his board. I tried to check her, she jumped me, crowned him and told us both to move."

"Did you do it?"

First Uniforms in British Navy.

The first notice of an order providing that men and officers in the British navy should wear a uniform was made public March 5, 1748, in the Jacobite's Journal, and from that time on the officers and men have worn the uniform while in service.

IS BUSY LEGION ORGANIZER

Vice Commander of Body in New York Perfects One of the Most Powerful Units.

Believing that the county organization is a vital part of the American Legion, William F. Deegan, first vice commander of the Legion in New York, has perfected in Bronx county one of the most powerful Legion units in the country.

Among the accomplishments of the Bronx county organization is the placing of bronze plaques on 950 trees as a memorial to the World war dead; employment provided for hundreds of ex-service men by the employment committee, and relief to sick and wounded veterans in New York city hospitals from the Legion's welfare committee.

Mr. Deegan, when asked to give some of his working principles, said:

"I insist upon every post being represented at a county meeting held once a month. I visit every post at least once or twice a month and for the benefit of Legionnaires have arranged for a legal committee to take up the principal troubles of the boys, without cost. I find that Legion men have absolute confidence in their officers, provided they know that they do not seek political office at their expense. To that end I make every effort to keep the organization free from men holding appointive offices.

"Personal contact with your post is absolutely necessary—telling them what is going on, listening to complaints and abolishing wherever possible parliamentary procedure, because delegates oftentimes will come to meetings and fear to speak on a subject which is vital to the interests of the organization, because they do not know whether they are in order."

During the war Mr. Deegan was attached to the staff of Gen. George W. Goethals and was assigned to inspect the army bases along the Atlantic coast and inland army depots. He was discharged a major in 1919.

LEGION MAN ON LONG HIKE

Former doughboys will reflect long upon the sad case of Sergt. Harley C. Sylvester, who likes the walking branch of the service so well that he voluntarily agreed to hike an average of 18½ miles a day for 40 days to tell the peaceful citizenry why they should learn to fight.

When officials of Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., looked about for the representative type of American soldier to advertise the citizens' military training camps to be held during the summer, they found Sergeant Sylvester, overseas veteran and member of the American Legion at the military post, still in the service.

Sergeant Sylvester is scheduled to cover 737 miles during the 40 days. He is visiting towns and cities in Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky. He carries light marching equipment and is the guest of his buddies in the Legion posts along the dusty route.

The American Legion will assist in obtaining recruits for the citizens' military training camps, according to a resolution adopted by the military policy committee of the ex-service men's organization.

TRANSFERS PAY TO LEGION

A striking example of the gratitude of the nation's disabled veterans for those who have aided them in their hours of suffering has come to the attention of Lee C. Prentice post of the American Legion in Fairmount, Minn.

Cletus Lappin, a young soldier severely wounded on the battlefields of France and now in hospital, rated totally and permanently disabled, received a check in payment for the state bonus while taking treatment in a sanitarium at Fairmount.

Asking to be propped up in bed, Lappin indorsed the slip, good for several hundred dollars, to the Prentice post of the Legion. "When I needed help," said the boy who had given the best of his life to his country, "the Legion boys stood by me. Now I'm going to do my little bit to help them get those clubrooms they are after."

UNFOLDS A TERRIBLE TALE

Captain Returning From Voyage to the Torrid Zone Has Story of Wonderful Experience.

A terrible tale of the torrid zone was unfolded by Capt. R. H. Torrible the other day on the arrival of the steamer Denis, which plies between New York and Manaois, a port about 1,000 miles up the Amazon river. The skipper vowed by marine and other saints that never had he seen sights so strange, according to the New York Times.

On a river which empties into the Amazon, near Manaois, he said he saw myriads of electric eels so strongly charged with electricity that the broad bosom of the stream was flooded with light and the crew were able to read their pocket Bibles by the glow, which was estimated at 40 watts per eel. When seamen brought some of these high-voltaged eels on deck, Captain Torrible said, the ship's dynamos were short circuited and there was the dickens to pay until the eels were disconnected.

But Skipper Torrible hadn't finished. While the Denis was tied up at the pier, a boy who was working with a loading gang fell into the river. The luminous eels surged around him, and when he was picked up he was dead. A physician who examined the body said that the lad was the victim of an electric overcharge. Captain Torrible brought back with him a sun-dodging monkey, which prowled only at night. He declared that the simian, like an owl, was casual and apathetic by day, but when the sun went over the horizon the monkey had 20-20 glims and was an ultra-lively stepper. The captain took newspaper men into his cabin, where the pet was kept, and pulled down the shades. The sun dodger reacted to the gloom by appropriating and immediately eating a straw kelly recently purchased at considerable outlay by one of the reporters.

The skipper said that he had purchased a Brazilian sloth to bring back to the United States, but the animal was too lazy to eat and died on the way here.

Odd Assam Marriage Custom.

One of the strangest of marriage customs is that observed by some of the women of Assam. There the bride sometimes takes the initiative. She goes to fetch the bridegroom, and it is etiquette for him to hide and resist until carried off. Women of means are permitted to choose a temporary husband, and, when tired of him, pay him off and take another.

Jewsharp's Origin Hard to Trace.

The jewsharp is not a harp, and it has no connection with the Jews. The reason for the name is not known. Some authorities believe that it was originally called a jaw'sharp because it was played with the jaw. Others say it was first called the Jew's Trumpe, the name coming from the French word "jeu"—a "jeu d'trompe" or joy trumpet. Other peoples called it a mouth-drum or a humming-iron while the Italians designated it as the "scaccia pensiere," banisher of thought. The actual origin of the instrument, which is a universal sound-producer, is not known. It is known to be of very ancient origin, for the Chinese books of the twelfth century show the jewsharp as almost identical with the European form.

Best Way to Cut Cardboard.

Cardboard is used for so many purposes that it is well to know how to cut straight edges. Never use scissors for the purpose, because that makes ragged edges. First lay a brass-edged ruler on the cardboard with brass edge upward. As the ruler is beveled, the brass will be a fraction of an inch above the board when properly placed. Now procure a very sharp penknife, hold the ruler firmly, and draw the knife along the brass edge. Do not attempt to cut through the cardboard the first time, but merely score it deeply. Now remove the ruler and cut through the incision. The result will be as clean a cut edge as a picture dealer can make on his mats.

Vectis and Mona Islands.

Vectis is the Roman name of the Isle of Wight, an island in the English channel, belonging to Hampshire, England, separated from the mainland by the channels of Solent and Spithead. It is reversed by a range of chalk downs, and is noted for picturesque scenery. Its area is 145 square miles. Mona is the Latin name of Anglesea. Angelsey, or Anglesea, is an island and county of North Wales, which lies northwest of the mainland from which it is separated by Menai strait. It was an ancient seat of the Druids, was conquered by the Romans under Suetonius Paulinus in 61 A. D., and by Agricola in 78. Later it became a Welsh stronghold.

Telephone for the Deaf.

The "Phonophor," for people hard of hearing, is the smallest telephone yet produced. It is about an inch long, and its open end being inserted in the ear, is held there by its shape, no strap being necessary. It is adjustable for maximum clearness. The usual membrane could not be employed, and a piece of specially treated skin with a bit of iron in its center is substituted.

RAISE OWN FOOD

Have Really Comprehensive System of "Gardening" as Well as Knowledge of Other Trades.

The dark forests of Central America shelter a remarkable tribe of agricultural ants, if we are to credit the testimony of competent investigators. These are foresters, road makers, wood choppers and gardeners, and it is said they actually plant and raise all their own food. The traveler in these forests is surprised to see many great trees half stripped of their foliage, and whole tracts of smaller ones left completely bare, says a writer in the Christian Science Monitor.

Everywhere, too, he sees little well-beaten paths leading in and out, from the open country to the center of the forest, and these are covered with busy workers. They run to and fro, some heavy laden with bits of leaf they have torn from the trees, others empty-handed on their way to market.

These ants, as a rule, build their nests on the outer edge of the forest, often under some big tree. The roads are kept in perfect repair by corps of workers detailed for the purpose—trained civil engineers and road menders, one supposes, who can do their work intelligently and well. One can see them picking up stray bits of debris, or earth, clearing the track of everything that might hinder the busy gardeners in their work.

What becomes of all of the green stuff they collect? All the ants in that part of the world could not consume such piles of leaves.

The little ants are gardeners, and the leaves are used in their mushroom-beds. In the first place, they work the green-leaf substance over into little brown balls that eventually become a soft, spongy mass, grown over with fungus germs. On close examination, one can see tiny white knobs, the swollen ends of hairlike filaments. These are the mushrooms on which the farming ant lives.

An enthusiastic student has made some interesting experiments with the ants and their garden-truck. He placed a few ants in a glass dish half-filled with the sort of rose-leaves of which they were fond. They made tunnels in the sand, but left the leaves untouched.

He repeated the experiment, but placed some of the little "ant cabbages" on one of the leaves, and with his forceps lifted one of the imprisoned ants upon it. The little insect at once rushed off with the news of food to its comrades, and all came hurrying up to taste.

The experimenter then put into the dish some of the loose ant food found in their nests. It was curious and delightful to watch the busy creatures as they began at once to put it into order, arrange it in careful piles, and continue the cultivation of the tiny mushrooms.

Another scientist found on an abandoned ant-mound a large mushroom that had evidently been left to grow up from some spores of ant food left in the nest. It was of a handsome species; the cap was reddish purple and dotted over with small scales, the gills were white, and the spores of a yellowish color. He planted some of the spores, and they grew thriftily, thus proving that the ants really raise true mushrooms, and can be said to follow the occupation of kitchen-gardening.

Destroyers Supreme.

"We knew whenever a submarine left a German port, and we kept track of it day by day until it returned home," says Admiral William S. Sims, in the World's Work. "No U-boat ever made a voyage across the Atlantic without our knowledge. The submarine was a slow traveler, and required a minimum of 30 days for such a trip; normally the time would be much longer, for a submarine on this long voyage seldom cruises at more than five knots. Our destroyers and anti-submarine craft were much faster, and could easily cross the Atlantic in ten days. It is, therefore, apparent that a flotilla of destroyers stationed in European waters could protect the American coast from submarines almost as successfully as if it were stationed at Hampton Roads or Newport."

A Better Show.

A "militant," as the really virulent type of advanced woman is called, said to Governor Miller at a charity ball in Albany:

"You men! We'll take your special privileges from you yet. We'll oust you from politics, the arts and everything else."

Governor Miller smiled before the militant's ire. Then he nodded toward a group of pretty girls in backless and sleeveless gowns, short skirts and all the other extravagances of the 1921 mode.

"Oh, I don't know," he said. "As I look around, it seems to me that the ladies are giving man a better show than he ever had before."

New Wheat Storage Plan.

An old suggestion comes from England as to conserving wheat. It is proposed to crush or rough grind wheat, then soften with superheated steam and compress in hard blocks and store until wanted, when a simple crushing process would fit it for flour manufacture.—Scientific American.

He Couldn't.

The Orator—"Work, my friends, is the lot of man! Man was sent into this world to earn his living by the sweat of his brow. You didn't find Adam walking about the Garden of Eden with his hands in his pockets!"—The Passing Show (London).

GOT ALONG WITHOUT BOSSING

Joseph Pulitzer Selected His Right-Hand Men With Care, and Then Let Them Alone.

There is an old proverb to the effect that a good boss makes a good workman. There must be something in it. The most successful employers are those who have the most worthwhile employees. Part of the success, no doubt, is in picking the employee. Another part, perhaps, is in letting him alone. If he is worth keeping he is worth trusting.

"Joseph Pulitzer never dictated to me," said Samuel G. Blythe, according to an exchange. "He never told me what to write or what not to. Only once in my life did he even make a request of me."

Blythe was for years the star man in the great blind editor's Washington bureau. Now and then, as Blythe explained, Mr. Pulitzer went to some trouble to prove in the editorial column that Blythe was suffering from a prolapsus of the intellect. Sometimes he massed facts to show that his opinion differed monumentally from that of his Washington luminary. But he never dictated, said Blythe. Or almost never. But once he did ask a favor.

"I had been sharpshooting at the manner in which a great firm of architects was abusing the exterior of the White House," said Blythe, "when one day I got a wire from the old man. It ran something like this:

"'Unless you have a deep personal feeling in the matter I wish you would cease further reference to the rebuilding of the White House. Please understand this is not a criticism of what you have written. But the same firm of architects is building a house for me, and if you don't lay off I'll not get into it for two years.'"

Blythe's conclusion was that an employer of that sort is fairly sure to have employees who will rob graves, sit up all night, or tear a thesaurus to tatters for him.

RULED LONG IN WILDERNESS

Colin Rankin, Recently Deceased, Was Fifty Years With the Hudson's Bay Company.

Colin Rankin, who died in Montreal recently at the age of ninety-four, was the first native Canadian to enter the service of the Hudson's Bay company. After a half-century in the company's employ, this patriarch of the fur trade retired as chief factor in 1898.

He was taken into the Hudson's Bay company's service in 1848 by Sir George Simpson, known as the "emperor governor." Sir George was one of the ablest of the long line of governors that began in 1670 with Prince Rupert, famous champion of the house of Stuart in Cromwellian wars. Under him, the company was merged with the North West company, which for years had been its deadly rival in the fur trade. Under him, too, the company reached its meridian of power and dominion and ruled three-fourths of the North American continent.

Mr. Rankin's service was almost exclusively in eastern Canada. He was in charge of posts at Mattawa, Lachine, St. Maurice, Kickendatch, Bersimis, Saguenay, Simcoe and Temiskaming. He was chief factor over the Lake Superior district and the Ottawa river district. He was known for his vigor of mind and body, and his career, which missed but six years of rounding out a century, was an epic of the wilderness adventure.

Flour Maker's Proud Record.

Ranking as the champion flour maker of the world, John Kraft, who retired March 1, after continuous service for 46 years, holds the unique record of making flour enough to feed the United States and its possessions for a period of one year.

Because of impaired vision, the Argonaut states, Mr. Kraft, who is sixty-nine years old, terminated his connection with a Minneapolis flour company after establishing a record which milling engineers believe will stand for many years. Engineers at the plant estimate that during his 46 years of active service Mr. Kraft made 138,000,000 barrels of flour. According to the veteran miller, an average normal person consumes about one barrel of flour a year, or its equivalent. Mr. Kraft's output, therefore, could feed the population of the entire United States and its possessions, which is approximately 115,000,000, and at the end of the year have a large surplus.

Jugoslavia Prosperous.

Jugoslavsi is reported to be in better financial condition than most of its neighbors. Its national debt is about $600,000,000 gold and the budget approximately balances. Per capita taxes are considerably less than one-third what they are in Roumania, Czechoslovakia and France. The wealth of the country is at present mainly agricultural. Grazing is an important industry. Several new factories have recently been opened and it is interesting to note that some of these are financed, wholly or in part, with the capital of Russian refugees who managed to bring their wealth with them when they escaped from their own country.

No One to Talk To.

The supervisor of the Cascade national forest in Oregon has engaged a number of women for duty as fire lookouts this summer. The women will dwell in lonely cabins on the high mountain peaks until the fall rains set in or until there is no further danger of forest fires.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Saturn Not So Large as Jupiter.

The planet Saturn is not quite so large as Jupiter. Its grand array of rings and satellites, however, renders it the most stupendous object in the solar system. To the naked eye, when near opposition, it shines as a bright star of the first magnitude.

Mustn't Expect To Much.

A United States senator had just finished a night's work on a speech. "You have convinced me," said his secretary, "except for one trifling detail. Where do I, the man who has to buy meat and bread, get off?" The senator touched his nose with his finger and replied sagely: "Well, no legislation is 100 per cent perfect."

ALSACE BEGINNING TO LIVE

Writer Finds a Feeling of Relief Pervading the People of the Province, With Reason.

It is a strange, yet stimulating experience for anyone who is interested in the relations between peoples to visit the much-contested strip of land known as Alsace. The last time I was in Alsace was more than twenty years ago. It was the day after Bismarck's death, and everywhere the black-white-red flags were hanging out at half-mast in honor of the man who had made the two provinces a Reichsland—part of the new German empire.

Today Bismarck's work is undone; gone, even from Germany itself, is the black-white-red flag; gone are the Prussian officers and officials, the red-hatted station masters, and all the other paraphernalia of imperial German routine. The older order survives but here and there, in the great official buildings erected and arranged on the grandiose German (or, as the Germans now call it, Wilhelminn) scale, in the familiar square blue German letter boxes, in the neat blue street signs which have been left standing with a neat new French sign affixed above or beneath. No doubt the minor officials have been but little changed. The village station master and the postman have but doffed their German insignia to don its more easy-fitting French equivalent. But if the men are the same, the faces, as well as the uniforms, are different. There is a feeling of relief, of detente, in the air. One has the sense of a people that has returned to the normal. At last, after a long ordeal, they can be themselves. They are free to settle down and to begin to live.—Alfred E. Zimmern in the Manchester Guardian.

Alliteration's Awful Antics.

Adam, an ancient antediluvian, ate an apple. Adam's angry Author aroused angrily at Adam's audacity; and, as all admit, Allah's affront admits approval. Adam admitted all, and as admonished, accepted Allah's alternative. "Abscond, Adam!" added Allah. "Amble away and act as awakened acolyte. Adieu, absent-minded Adam, and abhor absinthe always. Adam ambled away, and at all accounts admitted accountability. "All acts are awry," asserted Adam, and alas, after all, Adam and apples are always aptly and abjectly associated. Ain't apple acquisition awful? (Anyhow, as Adam acquired apples.)—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

GIRL SCOUT CAMP NEWS

The Girl Scout camp has completed its fourth successful week. The council feels amply repaid for their efforts. The camp leader, Mrs. O'Loughlin, has been all the more than the council anticipated. Mrs. Daley, who has charge of the cooking, has lived up to her city and county-wide reputation. The girls have appreciated and greatly benefited by this extraordinary opportunity of spending a vacation in one of the most healthful localities of the Catskills at the exceedingly low figure of $6.50 per week.

The council feels gratified by the indorsement of the many parents who have visited the camp while their daughters were there. A mother who visited the camp this week told one of the council members that the camp was greatly benefiting her daughter in many ways. All of the reports from parents have been similar.

Since July 13 the camp has been completely filled and will be until August 10. The week of August 10 there are several vacancies and beginning August 17 there is plenty of room. The last two weeks of August were saved for employed girls but the response has not been good, probably from the fact that most girls had already arranged for their vacations.

We are now offering the camp opportunity to any girl, scout or otherwise, in Kingston or Ulster county.

The Girl Scout organization is nonsectarian and the camp has been so carried on. There is a Catholic Church at Phoenicia and at a small charge some of the girls, who wished to, have gone by auto to church under the chaperonage of Mrs. Daley. Some of the Protestant girls have also gone to church. There have been a number of Jewish girls in camp. There is a very interesting group of Jewish girls registered for the week of August 10. Are there other girls who would like to join this group?

The minimum age for girls has been 12 years. We find now that we can care for a few younger girls if they wish to register. The camp is so large that girls of different ages can be supervised in the same week and still have everyone happy.

Register now. It will be a vacation which will have lasting benefit. Call or telephone Miss May E. Davis, 152 Smith avenue. Telephone 1185-W.

In Police Court.

James Harrison, 22 years old, of New York city, while watching the ball game at the Athletic Field Wednesday afternoon saw some other men in one of the coaches on the West Shore tracks and after the game joined them. As night fell he felt sleepy and as he was without money he decided the coach would afford an ideal sleeping berth. He was found asleep by Officers Murphy and Fatum. Judge Schirick this morning gave him an hour to get out of town.

Joseph McNelis was arrested Wednesday afternoon by Officer Fout on a charge of parking his auto with the tail end sticking out into the street on Railroad avenue. As this was his first offense he was discharged by the court.

A Great Heap of Small Sticks.

Grammar being but an introduction to the understanding of authors, if it be made too long or exquisite to the learner, it is a manner mortifieth his courage. And by the time he cometh to the most sweet and pleasant reading of old authors, the spark of fervent desire of learning is extinct with the burden of grammar like as a little fire is soon quenched with a great heap of small sticks; so that it can never come to the principal logs where it should long burn in a great pleasant fire.—Sir Thomas Elyot, "The Governor" (1531).

CHICKEN THIEVES GIVEN A CHANCE

Steven Wesolowski, 18 years old, and Peter Bonofsky, 16 years old, two chicken thieves who have been helping themselves from the hen roosts of North Rondout residents, and who were rounded up by Sergeant Hanley, were arraigned in police court before Judge Schirick this morning. They were both represented by Attorney A. J. Cook, who entered a plea of guilty for them, and urged clemency.

Both boys have been in trouble before and their faces were familiar ones to Judge Schirick, but he said that he had decided to give them one more chance, and if Mr. Cook was willing he would place them on probation to report to him for a period of six months. Mr. Cook agreed and said that if the boys violated their parole he would ask the court to revoke the paroles.

Judge Schirick warned both boys that he was giving them this chance and if they did not want to be placed in institutions they had better watch their steps.

Metternich's Egotism.

Instances of Metternich's self-satisfaction are everywhere in his autobiography and his private letters; one could almost be persuaded that the great Austrian statesman and diplomat was quite fond of himself. "I judge of the Revolution more truly than most men who have been in the midst of it," he writes. "I have to meet the German ministers, they expect me as a Messiah." "Fain's memoirs of the year 1813 are worth reading—they contain my history as well as Napoleon's." "The public journals, which do not usually pass me over, follow me step by step." "As an instance of how right as such is acknowledged by the majority of people, I may mention the thorough confidence shown in me by all parties." In a letter describing his daughter Hermione he says, "She is very like my mother; therefore, possesses some of my charm."—Kansas City Star.

Learn to Know Words Well.

Guesswork didn't make Demosthenes or Cicero or Shakespeare a word master. As one who has given his best efforts to teach men the right use of words, says: "Milton, mighty magician of majestic prose, under whose wonderful touch words became charmed and electrified; Flaubert, who believed that there was one and only one best word with which to express a given idea; De Quincey, with his weird power over words, and Lincoln, of simple Saxon speech—these illustrious men were assiduous in their study of words." For that matter, study words carefully if only to increase your conversational power. The greater your knowledge of words, the wider your range of thought will be and the easier you will find it to converse on any subject.—H. Addington Bruce in Chicago Daily News.

Ancient Uses of Fire.

Fireworks, as we know them today, remarks London Answers, were not known to antiquity, but the ancients employed works of fire in connection with their religious festivals. The early monarchs of Asia, according to Herodotus, commanded that ensigns of fire, considered holy and eternal, should be carried at the head of their armies on little altars of silver. Fire was used by the Romans in their religious rejoicings; but the Greeks introduced illuminations. Lighted lamps were held at a certain feast in honor of Minerva, who gave them oil; of Vulcan, their inventor of lamps; and of Prometheus, who was said to have rendered them service by the fire which he had stolen from heaven.

Bamboo Serves All Purposes.

The first thing a farmer does in China is to plant round three sides at least of the site of his house a bamboo fence or grove, the second to cut it down gradually, and therefrom make every conceivable thing he may want, from the house itself down to his fan, opium-pipe and chop-sticks.

REAL HUMORIST OF AMERICA

In One Writer's Opinion, the Country Editor Is Entitled to Honor of the Title.

The funniest things which are written and printed in this country are not written by Irvin Cobb or George Ade or Ring Lardner. They are not written by the professional humorist of the great newspapers.

They are written by the so-called country editors and notably by so-called country editors of Ohio and Kansas. We hardly think anyone with a real sense of humor who reads large numbers of newspapers and magazines and modern books will dispute this assertion.

Humor is merely the ability to see and react understandingly to the mirth-provoking side of human nature, which is not the least ample of its sides. A humorous paragraph may be grossly exaggerated in its interpretation of human nature, but human nature must be somewhere down near the bottom of it or it is a failure.

This explains why humor is so much more amusing, so much more satisfying than wit. Wit needs no human nature as its foundation. It may be simply a lightning-like play on mere words, sufficient to cause a smile, a laugh perhaps, but none of the solid comfort derived by the discerning from true humor.—Ohio State Journal.

Compliment to the Mare.

Talk of automobile drivers being arrested for violating the speed limit when they fly up and down the highways at 40, 50, 60, etc., miles an hour, drew one day a bit of reminiscence from Captain Thomas E. Hells of the United States secret service.

"I remember one time back in a little Ohio town," said the captain, "when my father was stopped by an officer of the law because he was driving his mare more than 12 miles an hour.

"'You was going more than twelve miles an hour,' said the officer; 'I'll arrest you for speeding.'

"'No, get up, get up,' my father said. 'That's a compliment to the mare. She can't go 12 miles an hour.'—Detroit Free Press.

Cat's Meat.

The port of London authorities are spending more than $5,000 a year for cat's meat, that the large army of cats required to deal with the rats and mice infesting the docks may be supported in the style to which they have been accustomed. So presumably the rats are purely "sportsmen," just kill the rats for the fun of the thing, but never eat their prey. And also, presumably, the rats don't make much headway with their jobs, since we are assured the staff has been continually increased—and likewise the appropriations for their support. It looks like a political opportunity.—Los Angeles Times.

Ashes Clean Chimneys.

For cleaning chimneys which have contained milk there is nothing equal to wood ashes.

Many children innocently cheated out of the very food they need daily

Everyone knows that health is the most valuable asset of life. From birth to maturity is the "construction period."

A robust and healthy child will usually develop into a vigorous man or woman. But malnutrition will invariably hamper normal growth and when the child reaches maturity he or she is anaemic, poorly nourished and liable to disease.

Many children today are innocently cheated out of the very foods they need. Some parents, either through lack of knowledge, or carelessness, do not provide those foods which strengthen and nourish the growing child.

It is the duty of parents to think for the child in these matters.

Grape-Nuts, the well-known food made of whole wheat flour and malted barley, served with milk or cream, is one of the most nutritious foods in the world. It provides the elements necessary to nutrition and is a balanced food.

Quite aside from its superior nutritive value, is its delicious appetite appeal. Especially attractive with fresh fruits or preserves.

Grape-Nuts is served and sold everywhere—in leading hotels and restaurants; at lunch counters; in every good grocery store in every city, town or village in the United States. Where you can't find Grape-Nuts—you won't find people.

BOY BLOWN TO PIECES.

Playing With a Bomb Found On Staten Island.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Aug. 4.—Frank Cafero, 12, was blown to pieces and his brothers, Joseph, 9, and John, 15, injured when a bomb with which they were playing at their home in Staten Island exploded today.

The children had found the bomb on the federal quarantine grounds, and took it home to play with. Frank struck it with a hammer, and the resulting explosion tore him to pieces, while his brothers, nearby, were struck by fragrants. The eldest brother was taken to the hospital while little Joseph escaped with only slight injuries.

How the bomb came on government property is a mystery.

Washington, Aug. 4.—Not a drop of home brew was found in the national capital during July by the police who conducted rum raids, it was disclosed today in the monthly report. This would indicate, the police said, that Washington is inhabited by drys, or, on the other hand, that residents of the capital are so well supplied with old stuff that they don't need to resort to home brew.

DIDN'T HAVE TO ASK FOR IT

Simple Matter of Finance by Which Frederick Became Possessed of All-Day Sucker.

Frederick has not yet learned the addition and multiplication tables, but he has reached such an understanding of finance as a verb transitive that one wonders as to his future.

"Here, Frederick, you be mother's big man and take this empty milk bottle to the grocery on the corner and bring back a full bottle of fresh milk for baby."

"And I pay the money to the man, mumsie?"

"No, dear. You know how we get it sometimes. The man will charge it."

"Haven't you got any pennies, mumsie?"

"No, Frederick, mumsie hasn't any pennies for candy this time. Now be careful. That's a nice little man."

Frederick returned safely with a bottle of best grade milk. Also, he had a fine all-day sucker in his mouth.

"Why, Frederick! I hope you didn't ask the grocer to give you that candy."

The sucker had to be removed before the youngster could articulate.

"No—I wouldn't ask—I paid for it."

"Paid! Where did you get the money?"

"He give me a nickel for the empty bottle and then I pay for the sucker, and then—then he charge you for the new bottle milk."

WHAT REAL VACATION MEANS

Play Is the Foundation, and That Consists of Doing Anything That Is Not Work.

A real vacation, if you can get one, consists of play, asserts Preston Slosson in the New York Independent. Play is the opposite of work. Play is whatever is done for its own sweet sake. If you build a fire to warm yourself or to cook a dinner you are at work.

If you build a bonfire because you like to see sparks redden against the sable background of the night you are at play. If you dance to improve your waistline or to learn a new step you are working.

If you dance because you "just can't make your feet behave" when the orchestra starts, you are playing.

If you go fishing to catch fish you are as much at work as if you were building bridges or writing editorials to make money. If you go fishing in the true fisherman's spirit you won't care much whether they bite or not.

The vacation mind is a law unto itself. If it enjoys an occupation it keeps on while the enjoyment lasts, though every fiber of the tired body may be shouting "quit."

If it ceases to enjoy an occupation it stops at once, though it create consternation all around. A real vacation is a trip into a fairyland, where the natives never heard of duties or obligations and the only law is "Do what you really like."

Cherry and Plum Trees.

Can you positively distinguish between a cherry tree and a plum tree in the spring of the year before the trees carry fruit? You may think that you can, yet, so similar are some cherry and plum trees that eventually you will surely fail unless you employ the simple rule that trained horticulturists follow. That one infallible guide is this: The leaves of the cherry, both in the bud and just after emerging from the bud, are folded together like the pages in a book, while those of the plum are rolled up like a magazine. And, by the way, the leaves of the peach are folded like those of the cherry, and the leaves of the apricot are rolled like those of the plum.

Well Supplied.

Emery had the whooping cough, and it had hung on for a long time. In the worst of it he had contracted a bad cold that added to his discomfort. When he had finally recovered from the effects of that, he was once more allowed to play out of doors.

One morning, as he started out, he commenced to sneeze, and his mother exclaimed in despair: "O, Emery, you have taken another cold," but did not keep him in the house.

He was swinging on the front gate as one of the neighbors went by, who hailed him with, "Hello, Emery. How are you this morning—pretty well?"

Emery answered: "No, sir; I've got two colds and the whooping cough."

Protects From Corrosion.

Browning electroiytically is the method of protecting aluminum and aluminum alloys from corrosion proposed by L. von Grotthers. The electrolyte consists of a sulphur compound of molybdenum, and the metal to be protected is suspended in this solution with a zinc anode at a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees C. The dark brown coating soon developed is not cracked by bending or rolling the metal. The aluminum articles coated in this way are stated to have been free from corrosion even after immersion in salt solution for two months.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Aug. 4.—Changes in securities on the stock exchange continued irregular this morning and trading was active. Mexican Petroleum was unchanged at 107¼. Baldwin Locomotive was unaltered at 75½. American Locomotive declined ½ to 83¾. Sinclair Oil rose ⅛ to 20⅜. American Sugar was off ¾ to 65¼. U. S. Steel declined ¼ to 75¼. Reading declined ½ to 70⅛. Southern Pacific rose ¼ to 79. Studebaker rose 1¼ to 79¾. Bethlehem Steel "B" rose 1 point to 51 and Royal Dutch rose ⅜ to 52. Chandler Motors as also active and strong moving up 1⅜ to 49¾. Central Leather issues were weak, the common falling one point to 33 and the preferred was down ¾ to 65½. Union Pacific opened up ⅞ at 122½. Northern Pacific was in supply, yielding ⅜ to 78¼ and Republic Steel was down ½ to 47¼.

Price movements continued irregula during the first hour and business generally was quiet. Most importance was attached to the trading in Vivaudou, which moved up to 71⅞, an advance of 1 point from the close yesterday, the buying generally coming from interests identified with the property. Studebaker reacted from 80½ to 79⅜ but was in demand and again quickly rallied to 80½. Chandler Motors, after advancing to 49¾, reacted to 48¾. Northern Pacific continued in supply, selling down to 78, a loss of 1 point. The steel industrials were generally well held and showed little changes.

Business on the stock exchange became extremely quiet in the afternoon and the market was then without support feature. Many of the stocks that had made advances around midday were in moderate supply in the later trading, and sustained moderate reaction. Pierce Arrow issues were under special pressure, the common stock yielding over 1 point to 14⅛ and the preferred dropping over 4 points to 29. U. S. Steel held around 75¾. American Sugar Refining, after rising from 67, reacted to 66¼.

The market closed heavy; government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds strong.

Attempted Extortion.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 4.—Accused of attempting to extort $4,000 from Giuseppe Drago, 59 years old, of No. 160 Seventh street, under threat of death, two men and a woman are under arrest here after an automobile chase from the Drago home. Drago, who is a retired huckster, received two letters demanding money.

Bear Invaded a Flivver.

Even bears like motorcars, as is proved by an incident which occurred in Giant forest, California. A sedan was left at the foot of Moro rock while the occupants climbed the stairway for the glorious views of the Saw Tooth range and the San Joaquin valley. On their return they found a black bear cub comfortably seated inside the car, which he had entered through an open window. Bruin was licking up the last of the sandwiches in the lunch and was persuaded to leave his comfortable quarters only at the point of a pole.

Not a Bad Description.

Alice was taken to a dance one evening. The next day, while playing with her playmates, her mother overheard her telling them about the dance. And this is the way she described it: "The papas put their arms around the mammas, and they just walked, and walked and walked."

WISDOM OF TAKING "DAY OFF"

Leisure Time, That Has Been Earned Means Better Health and Better Work Afterward.

"There is nothing that clears the cob webs so effectually out of one's brain as a day off," the Young Old Philosopher was saying. "Just as we plan our work, we should plan our play only, most of us, in the clamor of the times, forget that to loaf occasionally is as necessary as to drudge; and we confuse leisure with laziness.

"I know in my own case how difficult it is for me to make up my mind, definitely and unbendingly, that I require now and then, a morning away from my desk.

"So if the day off means so much to us, mentally and physically, why are we afraid to take it when the opportunity arrives? I like nothing better than to see, in the big town, a group of middle-aged men hastening out in a motor car on some crisp morning, their golf sticks piled beside them, while others trudge to dreary tasks. They have earned their liberty, no doubt—let us hope so, at any rate; and they will be all the better tomorrow for those few hours of delightful sport and health-giving freedom.

"Too soon the curtain is rung down on this glowing world we live in; and it is heartbreaking to consider how many spots there are close at our gates which we never find the time to see and enjoy. Partly it is our own fault. The green earth cries out to us to come and tread the corridors of the countryside; instead, we cling to the granite of the city, and pace desolate hallways—the more desolate because they are crowded with people we do not know. And all of them are hurrying—where?

"I wonder. And so, no doubt, do they."—From the Outlook.

DATES FROM "DIVINE RIGHT"

"Star Chamber Proceedings" an Echo of the Days When Kings Could Do No Wrong.

"Star Chamber Proceeding" is an expression now almost invariably used to denote an official action which is conducted in secret and, usually, in a high-handed manner.

The phrase comes to us from the fact that centuries ago there existed in England an all-powerful tribunal consisting of a committee of the king's privy council. The custom was either instituted or revived by Henry VII, in 1486.

This council had omnipotent powers and was unfettered by rules of law. It dealt with civil and criminal cases alike by "bill and information," without the aid of a jury, and could inflict any form of punishment short of death.

The original was "star chamber" because in the room where the council met were deposited the Jewish bonds known as "stars" from the Hebrew word shetar, meaning a covenant.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Chinese Shoes Homemade.

There are shoemakers among the Chinese and shoes of varying grades are for sale in the shops, but many of the shoes worn by upper-class Chinese are products not of the shops but of the home. For the Chinese woman of good family who has been educated in the old-fashioned way, considers it both a duty and a pleasure to make the family shoes, and she lavishes upon them the money, the leisure, the taste and skill that do not enter into the making of the commercial article, writes Roland Gorbold in Asia Magazine.

The more wealthy Chinese men wear very charming, if somewhat unusual shoes, which might almost be called slippers. The soles, very much turned up at the toe, are made of bamboo and pith covered with white linen and are extremely rigid and light. The uppers of a pair in my collection are of pale blue silk, with an appliqued toe and motifs of purple and much embroidered in yellow, red and blue, enriched with gold.

Long Career as Statesman.

John Quincy Adams was the only ex-President who had a long public career after leaving the White House. Two years after his retirement from the presidency in 1829 he was elected to the house of representatives where he served until his death, more than 16 years later. He rendered ten years of public service after passing seventy, and was known as "the old man eloquent." Edward Everett Hale, in his "Memories of a Hundred Years," tells of a Down East sea captain who said he wished "they could take the old engine out of Adams and put it into a new hull." Adams was stricken in his seat at the capitol in Washington on a spot that is still pointed out to visitors.

Browning's Poetry.

The truth is that many readers of verse resent any demand upon their intellects; poetry to them being only a pleasing indulgence—an occasional substitute for a sherbet—not to be taken seriously. Certainly Browning's poetry is not for such. No one today who knows "Sordello" derides it, for, difficult as it is to the beginner, it contains many veins of the pure gold of poetry and its pictures of the passionate, tumultuous life of the late Twelfth and early Thirteenth centuries in Italy, with the fierce conflicts of Guelf and Ghibelline by which it was torn, are unequaled in vividness and truth by any historian.—Philip Stafford Moxon.

Town of the Nymphs.

A Tokyo correspondent of the New York World writes that not far from the city of Ishinomonsky, on the Pacific coast of Hondo, the largest of the islands which compose the Japanese empire, is a remarkable settlement commonly known as the Town of the Nymphs. It is several centuries old, and peculiar in that its women rule, the wife supporting the head of the family, while the husbands keep house, tend the children and do other work that elsewhere is in the woman's province. Because their business is to dive in the sea for pearls those women are called nymphs by the Japanese. The settlement is on Sehiam bay, where pearl shells are numerous and are taken from the bottom of the sea.

Fossilized Blood.

Blood is an extremely perishable substance, yet traces have been left and have been recognized after lapses of several thousand years. Traces of blood six thousand years old have been found in mummies, and bloodstains have been discovered upon bandages used in the surgery of ancient Egypt. In Siberia remains of it were recognized in frozen mammoths, whose flesh was fresh enough to be eaten by dogs after about 175,000 years of icy entombment. R. L. Moodie of the University of Illinois has found in the bone of a dinosaur some bodies which looked remarkably like blood, but his investigations have now satisfied him that they were really blood.

Progress Never Ceases.

The tree of life from primordial cells up to mammals shows intelligence ever widening up to man, declares a writer in the Minneapolis Journal. The human tribe and clan have foregleams of their organization in the social life of bees and ants. All animals are somewhere on the road to progress. Some stop at one point and some at another. But the higher animals retaining plastic power are but a little behind the lowest type of man. The separating line seems to be that man in some stage of his career becomes self-conscious and reaches abstract conceptions. Many animals clearly display elements of conscious life that reach a more complete manifestation in man.

Spiders That Fish.

It has been thought a wonderful thing that a dog has caught fish, but more wonderful as a fisherman is a spider that is found in South Africa. It measures four inches across with legs stretched out. It places itself at the edge of the water with two of its legs on a pebble or stone and the other legs spread out on the water. As the spider sits motionless, a fish comes swimming along under the spider's outstretched legs, which are then suddenly thrust down into the water, closed around the fish, and the spider makes a downward plunge, driving its fangs into it. At once the spider climbs out on its pebble or stone and devours the fish.

Millionth of a Second.

A chronoscope is employed when experimenting with high-power explosives used in guns, which registers the velocity of the projectile at sixteen successive points before it leaves the bore. It is possible with this apparatus to register time to the millionth of a second. In the older experiments, where the velocity did not exceed 1,500 or 1,600 feet per second this projectile recorded its time by knocking down a series of steel triggers projecting into the bore. But with velocities of several thousand feet per second the trigger, instead of dropping, frequently plowed a groove in the projectile, and this new device became necessary.

First Aid Paid.

Five zealous Hollywood Boy Scouts have suffered a shock. They noticed, while on their way to camp, a man apparently endeavoring to entice away two little girls who were crying bitterly. Promptly they surrounded him, threw him to the ground, and bound him hand and foot with ropes. Three scouts remained to guard him and the others went for the police. On returning they made the bitter discovery that not only had their victim escaped, but that he was an inoffensive father who had been taking his unwilling children home to bed."—Los Angeles Times.

Burden of Riches.

Those who envy the rich should read what William Henry Vanderbilt said, shortly before his death: "The care of $200,000,000 is too great a load for any brains or back to bear; it is enough to kill a man. There is no pleasure to be got out of it as an offset—no good of any kind. I have no real gratification or enjoyment of any sort more than my neighbor, who is worth only half a million. So when I lay down the heavy responsibility, I want my sons to divide it and share the worry which it will cost to keep it."

"I Shall Not Pass This Way Again."

Efforts to identify the author of this much-quoted quotation have failed. It has been attributed to Stephen Grellet, an American Quaker of French birth (1773-1855); R. W. Emerson, Edward Courtenay, earl of Devon; Sir Roland Hill (1744-1833); Marcus Aurelius, Miss A. B. Hageman, Addison, Thomas Carlyle and others. And it is also said that the germ of it is to be found in the writings of a Chinese philosopher. There seems to be some authority in favor of Grellet being the author, but the passage does not occur in any of his printed works.

GYPSIES FEEL WAR'S EFFECTS

In Rumania They Are Said to Be Starving—Slaves to Ancient Superstitions.

Of the dozens of different races in Rumania, none is more picturesque than the gypsies. Like their prototypes in other lands they rove the country in great caravans, earning stray pennies by begging, dancing, playing and telling fortunes.

In the cities they sometimes earn their "bread and onions" by shining shoes, peddling lemonade or acting as porters.

The high cost of living, which has drawn tight the strings of every purse, has brought double hardships to these wanderers. No matter how well they play their violins, no matter what good fortunes they see in the stars for those about them, they find it hard to coax pennies from the empty pockets of the war-oppressed Rumanian people. Many of them have starved to death.

Among the gypsy women and girls are to be found some striking types of beauty. Dark of complexion and hair, with shining, long-lashed black eyes, they are a delight to look upon. They have not yet acquired the art of using cosmetic as their sisters in other countries do.

Superstition plays a large part in the life of the gypsy. One of the many ancient customs which will survive among the women is to beat themselves frightfully if one of their children dies. They believe that the death has been caused by an evil spirit having entered the body of the child as well as the mother, and that if they chastise themselves the spirit will depart.

One Rumanian gypsy woman whom a relief worker visited was apparently about to die from pneumonia. The doctor found numerous bruises all over her chest, and these had seriously aggravated her condition. On questioning her he learned her bruises were due to a beating she had given herself because one of her eight children had died.

Art of Conversation.

Conversation reaches its best when it leaves veils and convention behind it, when people speak face to face. It may be impossible to attain this with many; in this perfect sense there are only a few with whom we really talk, and we cannot always talk even with them. It is, of course, always easy to exchange words, but many words may be uttered and yet nothing have been said.

There are moments when the veils are thrust aside and the closest intercourse becomes for a brief time possible. It is then that people talk of the one thing they know best, of their own self, and the self's relation to life's mysteries; it is then, and then only, that we approach the absolute, the true, though still it may be only at a distance.

The last reserve between soul and soul is rarely surrendered; and there is always the reserve, the limitation, that lies in the nature of spoken words.—Arthur L. Salmon in Chicago Daily News.

Not a Jim Dandy.

Dealers and manufacturers seeking permits to handle alcohol are required to answer innumerable questions on blanks supplied by the office of Charles J. Orbison, federal prohibition director for Indiana. Few fill out the blanks correctly the first time. Many become worried before they are through.

A permit seeker from the northern part of the state sent in his application. Then he had to change a serial number and then again a decimal fraction and then something else until at last he became dissatisfied with the whole arrangement. He wrote a letter to the prohibition director, and this is what he said:

"Say, do you know what a Jim Dandy is? Well, a Jim Dandy is a fellow who can keep up with all this — red tape and monkey business connected with alcohol. And I'm not a Jim Dandy."—Indianapolis News.

Ex-Convicts Hold Reunion.

There is one news story in New York that the newspapers kindly suppress each year. At least they do not mention any names. In one of the big hotels there is an annual dinner in a private banquet hall. Well-dressed men in evening clothes to the number of forty attend. There is nothing about them to indicate that they are anything but what they are—successful business men. They discuss over their meal the topics of the day and all know each other by first names. But when cigars are lighted, waiters and bus boys are driven out and the doors are locked. Then they discuss the past. All are ex-convicts who have served terms in Sing Sing. Two or three former wardens are usually the guests of honor. They have proved that an ex-convict can make good.

Trying to Save the Elk.

The elk are in danger of extermination. 10,000 head supposed to be in the Yellowstone having disappeared. This seems to be caused by cattle men grazing their herds on areas formerly occupied by the elk, which perish in great numbers when they find their old pastures denuded. Ranchmen in many cases have fed them hay out of pity and the federal authorities have bought and stored hay in the hope of preserving the breed. Cattle men are not much interested by these splendid examples of animal life, so that the government should do something on a large scale to preserve them.—Scientific American.

French Deputies Fear Plug Hat.

An American legislature may be brought to order and made to listen to the chair, as a rule, when the gavel is pounded loudly enough and continuously enough, but when the French chamber of deputies grows excited there is another method of restoring order. When the deputies have come to the state where they are pounding on desks with their canes and standing on chairs to shout abuse at each other over intervening heads, and when blows threaten and duels are in the air, the president of the chamber opens the lower right hand corner of his desk—the deep drawer—and takes out an ancient plug hat which must have been installed there shortly after the French revolution, to judge from its cut, and solemnly he rises to his feet, holding the hat out at arm's length. One by one the raging deputies notice the pose and the hat, and they fall silent before the threat, in fear that the hat in the president's hand may be put on his head. If it is that act adjourns the chamber.—La France, New York.

Reading Aloud.

It seems a misfortune that the art of reading aloud has lapsed to such an appreciable extent. To read well is no mean accomplishment, although not usually included in the bag of ordinary "parlor tricks." It necessitates not only the unhesitating pronunciation of words, but the quick grasp of the author's meaning, the placing of proper accent, the sense of rhythm that gives a certain melody to prose, the avoidance of sing-song poetry, and also and more important, a pleasant, well-modulated and sympathetic voice. Many who profess to find peace "nowhere save in a corner with a book," admit they find little pleasure in being read to, asserting appreciation and memory are assisted by the sight of the printed word. This is probably due to unusualness and would pass away in a short time.

Need of Friendship.

He that can only be useful on great occasions may die without exercising his abilities and stand a helpless spectator of a thousand vexations which fret away happiness and which nothing is required to remove but a little dexterity of conduct and readiness of expedients. No degree of knowledge attainable by man is able to set him above the want of hourly assistance, or to extinguish the desire of fond endearments and tender officiousness; and, therefore, no one should think it unnecessary to leave those arts by which friendship is gained. Kindness is preserved by constant reciprocation of benefits and interchange of pleasures; but such benefits can only be bestowed as others are capable to receive, and such pleasures imparted as others are qualified to enjoy.—Dr. Samuel Johnson.

Material Must Be in the Mind.

It's folly to imagine you can put anything into your mind. People by the thousands think they can put anything they want into other people's minds. The best they can do is to stir up natural ability. With this awakened there can be developed anything that lies within the range of the individual personality. The result will be that the mind will be able to do many things that not having been aroused it could never do. Some people get aroused in schools. Others with natural bents toward the why of things learn to think without the stimulus of others and give to the world many thoughts that help it to live better. One builds within the mind from the material stored there.

Systematize Work.

The skillful mechanic does not have to think how to employ the tools of his trade. Long use has accustomed him to work with them rapidly and accurately. If you have a routine work to do, learn to do it with as little mental effort as possible. The effort that will count in your success is the effort you bestow not on routine tasks but on unusual tasks. If your mind is continually occupied with the details of the job you will be in the same position as an executive who tried to run an office by doing everybody's work, thereby keeping him so close to details that he could have no perspective and exercise no generalship.—John Blake in Chicago Daily News.

Splendid Tapestry Borders.

The finest of all borders existing on extant tapestries are those by a pupil of van Orley's called Joss van Liere and belonging to a tapestry here exhibited called "Romulus Proclaimed King." It is of gold, silk and wool, the third of a series of six representing the foundation of Rome, woven probably from van Orley's designs, although the drawings by him in Munich intended for the same object do not agree with this tapestry. The extraordinary beauty of the landscape in the top left-hand corner and the strewn flowers in the foreground make this work a joy to see.

Rich Sulphur District.

At some remote time there must have been tremendous volcanic activity in the region which is today the gulf coast of Louisiana and Texas; for in those parts are found deposits of sulphur vastly exceeding in quantity any known elsewhere in the world. They are covered over by hundreds of feet of later sedimentary material, and to get at the sulphur, deep wells have to be sunk. Superheated water is forced down the pipes to melt the sulphur, which is brought to the surface by the power of compressed air. On cooling it is ready for shipment, being 99 per cent pure.

LOCAL DEATH RECORD.

Recent Deaths and Funerals of Persons in This Vicinity.

Peter Saile died at his home in Saxton on Thursday, July 28, at the age of 74 years. Deceased is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Edward N. Lasher of Kiskatown and Miss Ella C. Saile, and two sons, Charles H. and George W. Saile, of Saxton. Five grandchildren, one great grandchild, and one brother. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at his home and were conducted by the Rev. I. H. Heinrichs of Leeds. Burial was in Jefferson Rural cemetery, Catskill.

The funeral of Mrs. Hubert Caffrey was held this morning from her late residence, No. 19 Foxhall avenue, at 9 o'cock and from St. Mary's Church at 9:30, where a requiem Mass was offered for the repose of her soul by the Very Rev. Dean J. J. Hickey. The pall bearers were David Long, Thomas Murray, James Brennan, John McGrane, Peter Falvey and James Fergerson. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, showing the high esteem in which she was held. The interment was in St. Mary's Cemetery. Dean Hickey accompanied the remains to the cemetery and conducted the committal services. During the services at the church solos were rendered by Miss Heidecamp and Joseph Murphy. At the conclusion of the church services Miss Heidecamp sang "Beautiful Land on High."

Willis I. Roe died at his home, 117 North Front street, Wednesday afternoon, the result of a stroke of paralysis, the second one in two days. He was the son of the late John Roe who for a number of years was engaged in the teaming of bluestone and freight from the New York nightboats before the West Shore railroad was built, carting the freight to the uptown merchants and bluestone from the quarries in the town of Kingston to Wilbur. Willis, his son, and Chester B. Roe, for a long term of years a motorman on the trolley lines, succeeded their father in the teaming business continuing for several years. Deceased for some time kept a saloon on North Front street near Green street, and owned a number of properties in that section. Last week he awarded a contract for the erection of a large garage there. He is survived by two sons, Willis, Jr., and Irven Roe and one daughter, Mrs. Charles A. Johnston; also two brothers, John B. Roe of Brooklyn and Chester B. Roe of this city. Mrs. Roe, the wife of deceased, died on July 6, less than a month ago. The funeral services will be held from the funeral parlors of A. Carr & Son, 1 Pearl street, Saturday at 10 a. m. Interment in Wiltwyck cemetery.

Their Real Reason.

"But I thought men were supposed to adore women for having just what they haven't got, just as we adore them for their physical strength and their brains." "So they say, and so we say, because otherwise there would be no marriages," said Mrs. Vachell. "But it is a lie. We only love their strength for the sake of getting the better of it. They cultivate our foolishness because it gives them rest from competition, and they can sit down and plume themselves."—From "Three Loving Ladies," by Mrs. Dowdall.

The Huguenots.

Huguenots was the name applied by the Roman Catholics to the Protestants of France during the religious struggles of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries. The term is of doubtful origin. Some authorities say it is corrupted through Ignots, Iguenots, from the German Eidgenossen, confederates; while according to others, the word is a diminutive of Hugo, Hugues, Hugh, a patron saint of Tours.

Girls--Do You Know Why Your Hair Is Ugly?

If your hair is anything short of perfect—is losing color, too dry, wispy and difficult to arrange attractively, or if the scalp burns and itches, you should immediately use Parisian Sage. The first application removes all dandruff, cools and invigorates the scalp, and beautifies the hair until it is gloriously radiant.

Parisian Sage supplies all hair needs. It contains the exact elements needed to make the hair soft and wavy, and to make it grow long, thick and beautiful. It is delightfully perfumed—not sticky or greasy, and can be had at any drug or toilet counter.

Parisian Sage acts instantly—one application stops itching head and freshens up the hair. You will be surprised and delighted with this helpful toilet necessity, for nothing else is so good for the hair and scalp, and nothing so quickly beautifies the hair, giving it that enviable charm and fascination. Parisian Sage is inexpensive and easily used at home. McBride's Drug Stores sell lots of it and will guarantee it to you.

Peroxide Good Remedy.

For a painful ulcerated tooth use peroxide, either full strength or diluted one-half with warm (not hot) water. Nothing will relieve more quickly and it will cleanse the mouth and sweeten the breath. It is used for sore throat as well as for sores of all kinds, as it is antiseptic and one of the safest and cheapest germicides known. If it seems to make the gums a little sensitive after using, rinse the mouth with a weak solution of baking soda.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE TRAVELING FLOWERS.

"I've a story to tell you," said Mother Nature one day to her children.

"We'd like to hear the story," said the ferns.

"So would we," said the wild flowers.

"And we would, too," said the garden flowers.

"We love to hear anything you have to tell us," said the shrubs. "What are you going to tell us today?"

"My story," said Mother Nature, "is about some traveling flowers.

"A great, great, great many years ago, oh, so many, many, many years ago, there were not so many big cities as there are now.

"There was more room everywhere and people almost all had gardens and flowers and could walk just a little distance and gather all the wild flowers they wanted.

"But the cities grew up and somehow, without meaning to, I'm sure, the flowers were pushed out of the way.

"Many of the people missed the flowers and the ferns and the shrubs and the Nature children. But they couldn't do the work they had to in the city and have gardens, too, for there wasn't any room in the city for the gardens. Some of them worked in the city and had their homes in the country, but many more had to be in the city all the time.

"And city after city grew up in just this way. Well, as I have said, the Nature children were greatly missed, though the people tried not to feel too badly about leaving the Nature children.

"They still loved the Nature children and the Nature children still loved them and understood how things were.

"Well, when the springtime came along one year, after so many cities had grown bigger and bigger and so many people had gone to live in the cities, the Nature children called me and said:

"'Dear Mother Nature, we have something to ask you.'

"'What have you to ask me?' I said and then they told me.

"'Mother Nature,' they said, 'the Dream King has told us that many, many people from the cities would be out in the country places for holidays and for week-ends this spring.

"'So we have thought up a plan. You see, the Dream King tells us that every once in a while the people get very tired from all the business they must do and all the studying they must do, too.

"'They get tired of the same old talk of business and of studying. They get tired of talking of how much rent they must pay and where they can possibly find room to store away some jam and preserves from the country, which has been sent to them.

"'They get tired of all their worries which they have. The Dream King says they have lots of fun, too, and that city life is very pleasant, but that every once in a while they long for the country and the flowers and the smell of the nice old earth and of the blossoms.

"'So we've decided we would look our very best all the time, so that when the people from the cities come out to see us they may pick some of us and take us home with them so we'll cheer them up.'

"I told them I thought their idea was wonderful. And ever since then the flowers have all looked their best and the shrubs have all looked their best and the ferns have all looked their best, so they could cheer up the city people when they were taken back after holidays.

"The Sun, too, has worn handsome suits for the people to admire. He can't be taken back with them, but he can show them his beautiful golden-edged suit and his suit of many colors, for he says they've hardly time to look at him in the cities very often.

"And the birds have sung their prettiest songs to give the city people real country holidays.

"But the flowers which have traveled to the cities have done a great, great deal to add to the holidays of the city people, and have stayed fresh and bright in the city apartments for just as long as they could.

"So when any of you are picked and carried to the cities, keep your prettiest and freshest smiles on your faces."

And they all promised Mother Nature they would.

Cut Down Gas Bills.

Comparatively few people realize that the gas bills may be cut down materially by exercising care in lighting the gas. Hold a lighted match over the burner, then very slowly turn on the gas. If the gas is turned on full force before the match is applied, a slight explosion occurs which affects the meter and sends it forward rapidly.

COLONIALS WIN FROM SOLDIERS

It was a crackerjack game up to the sixth frame Wednesday afternoon at the Athletic Field when the ball tossers of the Army Reserve Depot of Schenectady clashed with the Colonial A. C., but in the seventh inning Miner Deitz, the Schenectady twirler, weakened and the locals with their batting togs on hammered out seven runs before the smoke of battle cleared. In the eighth frame the locals scored five more runs, which with the run obtained in the third stanza made their total score for the afternoon 13 runs, while the visitors had but three chalk marks on their side of the score board. McAuliffe was in the box for the locals and pitched excellent ball.

The score by innings: R. H. E.
Schenectady
0 0 0 2 1 0 0 0 0— 3 9 1
Colonials
0 0 1 0 0 0 7 5 x—13 16 3

Manager Brown announced Wednesday afternoon that the Saturday game at the Athletic Field would be between the Hoboken Club and the Colonials.

AT THE THEATRES.

Ethel Clayton At Keeney's—Wanda Hawley At Auditorium.

Ethel Clayton, charming Paramount star, has never appeared to better advantage than in "The Price of Possession" at Keeney's tonight. The scenes are laid in Australia and England and the variety is refreshing and as the action of the story never lags, interest is kept on the qui vive from start to finish. One scene where Miss Clayton makes a dive from the window of a tower into the sea and her rescue by the hero, is highly effective and thrilling. Rockliffe Fellows plays the leading male role. Friday and Saturday the super-special of the week's program is "The Passionate Pilgrim" an action newspaper story that breathes action and suspense throughout. Snooky the Humanzee and the children lovable in "You'll be Surprised," a new comedy of thrills.

"Her First Elopement" at the Auditorium tonight, is a gay, out-o'-doors comedy of surprise and amusing complications, with mischievous Wanda Hawley as the heroine. Art Accord in "The White Horseman" is the thrilling western chapter play, also Al St. John in a Sunshine comedy "The Simp." Friday Nick Carter in "The Opium Case."

Strong Words Against Jazz Music.

It will be recalled that some time ago our local Federation of Women's Cubs voted to do all in its power to secure better music for our movies and, for our young people everywhere, for that matter. Following out this avowed purpose, the Federation of Women's Clubs has asked The Freeman to bring to the attention of its readers the announcement of an article entitled "Does Jazz Put the Sin in Syncopation?" appearing in the August number of the Ladies' Home Journal, written by Mrs. Marx E. Obendorfer, national music chairman of the General Federation of Music Clubs. The following paragraph is taken from the article, giving pith and point indeed to the title: "Dancing to Mozart minuets, Strauss waltzes and Sousa two-steps would never lead to the corset-check room which now holds sway in hotels, clubs and dance halls. Nor would a girl who wore a corset in those days have been dubbed 'Old Ironsides,' and left a disconsolate wall-flower in a corner of the ballroom." Again: "Jazz originally was the accompaniment of the Voodoo dancer stimulating the half-crazed barbarian to the vilest deeds." But Mrs. Obendorfer does more than criticise jazz music, she tells how not only the music department of the General Federation of Music Clubs, which has taken as its motto, "To Make Good Music Popular and Popular Music Good," but the best American womanhood everywhere in doing its utmost to raise the moral standard of dance music and movie music.

At Sahler's Chautauqua.

There was a large attendance Wednesdy evening at the Dr. C. O. Sahler Chautauqua and all present were delighted with the rendition of the musical program and with the entertainment. Miss Margaret Angle of Clinton avenue, with Frederick Van Etten at the piano as accompanist, rendered two groups of song numbers most artistically. She has a rich soprano voice that has been well trained and with her charming personality made a great impression on the audience and was pronounced by the music students and critics as a coming vocal artist with a future that will bring her fame as a soprano soloist. Miss Clara Aimee Gottschalk was heard in three piano solos, each being artistically rendered, that called for encores. Mrs. Anne Huntress, the dramatic reader, was on the program for two readings.

SHOWERS HOLD UP HARVESTING WORK

The past week was generally favorable for crop growth and farm operations, although frequent showers interfered somewhat with harvesting, according to the summary of weather and crop conditions for the week ending August 2, sent out from the Ithaca office of the weather bureau. The first half of the week was warm, with maximum temperatures near 90 degrees; the latter half was cooler. Moisture is now generally adequate over the state, in all except the northern counties, where the showers were scattered.

The harvesting of oats and barley continues, barley is good, but the yield of oats generally is light. Corn continues good to excellent, and some sweet corn is being gathered on Long Island. The condition of potatoes varies considerably over the state with the late varieties generally in better shape than the early. Considerable blight is reported.

Haying is practically completed, and the second growth is starting well. Pastures are still very short but improving except in northern counties.

KERHONKSON.

Kerhonkson, Aug. 3.—Sunday night was "Primary Night" in the Kerhonkson Reformed Church. The occasion was the graduation exercises of six boys and girls from the primary department into the main Sunday school. The platform was beautifully decorated with massed wild flowers and ferns and formed a lovely setting for the young graduates who were seated (with Bibles in their hands) in the center. The whole exercises of the evening were carried out by the primary department in a way that brought many congratulations to their teachers.

The program was as follows:

Opening Song by congregation. Number 6
Greeting by Primary.
Prayer by Superintendent of Sunday School
Twenty-third Psalm by the Graduates
Song, "I'll be a Sunbeam for Jesus." Primary.

Get Many Silly Complaints.

Every day the postmasters in the largest cities receive countless letters of complaint. Not unnaturally among so large a number there are many of a frivolous nature. For example, one woman wrote that the carrier who delivered her letters was entitled to a woman twice his own age, and requested that he should be asked to leave off the engagement or be dismissed.

LEGION OFFICER KNOWS NAVY

Edward Sustford, Chairman of Committee on Naval Affairs, Has Climbed the Ladder.

Edward Elwell Spafford, newly appointed chairman of the American Legion's committee on naval affairs, knows the United States navy on land and on sea as few other men do.

Born in Springfield, Vt., Mr. Spafford was educated in the public schools. He received an appointment to the United States Naval academy in 1901. Assigned to the ship Washington, he became gunnery officer; at that time he was the youngest officer in the navy to hold this position.

While the Washington was lying off Cape Hatteras a sailor was washed overboard in a heavy sea. Risking his life in the waves, Mr. Spafford plunged overboard and succeeded in rescuing the seaman. His bravery was recognized in a letter of commendation from the secretary of the navy. He rose to the rank of lieutenant commander.

With the start of the war Mr Spafford offered his services to his country and he was made a lieutenant commander in the navy reserve corps. He served for a time as a member of the board of inspection and survey, which was in charge of the selection of ships to be purchased by the government. He directed the fitting out of the first 25 110-foot submarine chasers built for distance service and established a submarine chaser base at New London, Conn.

When the American navy became active in the Straits of Otranto, Mr. Spafford was sent to establish a submarine chaser base at Corfu, Greece, and later became chief of staff of that station. He was in charge of all operations and was on the first American submarine chaser which destroyed an enemy ship after locating it by the process of sound contact.

When the Austrians surrendered two battleships and two destroyers to the United States, Lieutenant Commander Spafford took them over. Later, he investigated the situation along the Dalmatian coast and made a special report on Fiume to the American peace delegation at Paris. He received the Distinguished Service Medal. Mr. Spafford is a member of Manhattan naval post of the American Legion in New York city.

SAYS NO MAN HER SUPERIOR

Who else but a bright-eyed, smiling American girl could have gotten away with it?

Sergeant Minnie Arthur of the United States marine corps was on duty in a recruiting office in Indianapolis, Ind., during the war. The major in charge was nervous; a colonel from Washington was coming to inspect; everyone brushed up on rules of military conduct. In walked the austere colonel. Sergeant Arthur remained working at her desk. Silver-eagles walked over to her desk and frowned.

"Um—ever get up when an officer comes in the room, sergeant?" he growled.

"Yes, sir, sometimes," Miss Three Stripes replied.

"Um—and I suppose you salute your superiors, too, eh?"

Sergeant Arthur smiled sweetly—and then her eyes snapped.

"Sir, I've never seen a man yet who was my superior."

And the colonel passed it off without a reprimand.

Miss Arthur, now vice-commander of Robert E. Kennington post of the American Legion in Indianapolis, enlisted for four years and served 18 months. She is still in the reserve, drawing $1 a month with which she buys hair nets. She is authority on Liberian golf and plays a good hand at "blackjack."

On the Square.

"We had quite a game up to the boarding house last night."

"Poker?"

"No. The landlady was going to put one of the boys for not paying his board. I tried to check her, she jumped me, crowned him and told us both to move."

"Did you do it?"

"Check."—American Legion Weekly.

First Uniforms in British Navy.

The first orders of an order providing that men and officers in the British navy should wear a uniform were made public March 5, 1748, in the Jacobite's Journal, and from that time on the officers and men have worn this uniform prior to service.

IS BUSY LEGION ORGANIZER

Vice Commander of Body in New York Perfects One of the Most Powerful Units.

Believing that the county organization is a vital part of the American Legion, William F. Deegan, first vice commander of the Legion in New York, has perfected in Bronx county one of the most powerful Legion units in the country.

Among the accomplishments of the Bronx county organization is the placing of bronze plaques on 950 trees as a memorial to the World war dead; employment provided for hundreds of ex-service men by the employment committee, and relief to sick and wounded veterans in New York city hospitals from the Legion's welfare committee.

Mr. Deegan, when asked to give some of his working principles, said:

"I insist upon every post being represented at a county meeting held once a month. I visit every post at least once or twice a month and for the benefit of Legionnaires have arranged for a legal committee to take up the principal troubles of the boys, without cost. I find that Legion men have absolute confidence in their officers, provided they know that they do not seek political office at their expense. To that end I make every effort to keep the organization free from men holding appointive offices.

"Personal contact with your post is absolutely necessary—telling them what is going on, listening to complaints and abolishing wherever possible parliamentary procedure, because delegates oftentimes will come to meetings and fear to speak on a subject which is vital to the interests of the organization, because they do not know whether they are in order."

During the war Mr. Deegan was attached to the staff of Gen. George W. Goethals and was assigned to inspect the army bases along the Atlantic coast and inland army depots. He was discharged a major in 1919.

LEGION MAN ON LONG HIKE

Former doughboys will reflect long upon the sad case of Sergt. Harley C. Sylvester who likes the walking branch of the service so well that he voluntarily agreed to hike an average of 18½ miles a day for 40 days to tell the peaceful citizenry why they should learn to fight.

When officials of Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., looked about for the representative type of American soldier to advertise the citizens' military training camps to be held during the summer, they found Sergeant Sylvester, overseas veteran and member of the American Legion at the military post, still in the service.

Sergeant Sylvester is scheduled to cover 737 miles during the 40 days. He is visiting towns and cities in Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky. He carries light marching equipment and is the guest of his buddies in the Legion posts along the dusty route.

The American Legion will assist in obtaining recruits for the citizens' military training camps, according to a resolution adopted by the military policy committee of the ex-service men's organization.

TRANSFERS PAY TO LEGION

A striking example of the gratitude of the nation's disabled veterans for those who have aided them in their hours of suffering has come to the attention of Lee C. Prentice post of the American Legion in Fairmount, Miss.

Cletus Lappin, a young soldier severely wounded on the battlefields of France and now in hospital, rated totally and permanently disabled, received a check in payment for the state bonus while taking treatment in a sanatorium at Fairmount.

Asking to be propped up in bed, Lappin indorsed the slip, good for several hundred dollars, to the Prentice post of the Legion. "When I needed help," said the boy who had given the best of his life to his country, "the Legion boys stood by me. Now I'm going to do my little bit to help them get those reinforcements they are after."

Where Ignorance Is Bliss.

UNFOLDS A TERRIBLE TALE

A terrible tale of the torrid zone was unfolded by Capt. R. H. Torrible the other day on the arrival of the steamer Denis, which plies between New York and Manaos, a port about 1,000 miles up the Amazon river. The skipper vowed by marine and other saints that never had he seen sights so strange, according to the New York Times.

On a river which empties into the Amazon, near Manaos, he said he saw myriads of electric eels so strongly charged with electricity that the broad bosom of the stream was flooded with light and the crew were able to read their pocket Bibles by the glow, which was estimated at 40 watts per eel. When seamen brought some of these high-voltaged eels on deck, Captain Torrible said, the ship's dynamos were short circuited and there was the dickens to pay until the eels were disconnected.

But Skipper Torrible hadn't finished. While the Denis was tied up at the pier, a boy who was working with a loading gang fell into the river. The luminous eels surged around him, and when he was picked up he was dead. A physician who examined the body said that the lad was the victim of an electric searcharge. Captain Torrible brought back with him a sun-dodging monkey, which prowled only at night. He declared that the simian, like an owl, was casual and apathetic by day, but when the sun went over the horizon the monkey had 20-20 glims and was an ultra-lively stepper. The captain took newspaper men into his cabin, where the pet was kept, and pulled down the shades. The sun dodger reacted to the gloom by appropriating and immediately eating a straw kelly recently purchased at considerable outlay by one of the reporters.

The skipper said that he had purchased a Brazilian sloth to bring back to the United States, but the animal was too lazy to eat and died on the way here.

Odd Assam Marriage Custom.

One of the strangest of marriage customs is that observed by some of the women of Assam. There the bride sometimes takes the initiative. She goes to fetch the bridegroom, and it is etiquette for him to hide and resist until carried off. Women of means are permitted to choose a temporary husband, and, when tired of him, pay him off and take another.

RAISE OWN FOOD

Have Really Comprehensive System of "Gardening" as Well as Knowledge of Other Trades.

The dark forests of Central America shelter a remarkable tribe of agricultural ants, if we are to credit the testimony of competent investigators. These are foresters, road makers, wood choppers and gardeners, and it is said they actually plant and raise all their own food. The traveler in these forests is surprised to see many great trees half stripped of their foliage, and whole tracts of smaller ones left completely bare, says a writer in the Christian Science Monitor.

Everywhere, too, he sees little well-beaten paths leading in and out, from the open country to the center of the forest, and these are covered with busy workers. They run to and fro, some heavy laden with bits of leaf they have torn from the trees, others empty-handed on their way to market.

These ants, as a rule, build their nests on the outer edge of the forest, often under some big tree. The roads are kept in perfect repair by corps of workers detailed for the purpose—trained civil engineers and road menders, one supposes, who can do their work intelligently and well. One can see them picking up stray bits of debris, or earth, clearing the track of everything that might hinder the busy gardeners in their work.

What becomes of all of the green stuff they collect? All the ants in that part of the world could not consume such piles of leaves.

The little ants are gardeners, and the leaves are used in their mushroom-beds. In the first place, they work the green-leaf substance over into little brown balls that eventually become a soft, spongy mass, grown over with fungus germs. On close examination, one can see tiny white knobs, the swollen ends of hairlike filaments. These are the mushrooms on which the farming ant lives.

An enthusiastic student has made some interesting experiments with the ants and their garden-truck. He placed a few ants in a glass dish half-filled with the sort of rose-leaves of which they were fond. They made tunnels in the sand, but left the leaves untouched.

He repeated the experiment, but placed some of the little "ant cabbages" on one of the leaves, and with his forceps lifted one of the imprisoned ants upon it. The little insect at once rushed off with the news of food to its comrades, and all came hurrying up to taste.

The experimenter then put into the dish some of the loose ant food found in their nests. It was curious and delightful to watch the busy creatures as they began at once to put it into order, arrange it in careful piles, and continue the cultivation of the tiny mushrooms.

Another scientist found on an abandoned ant-mound a large mushroom that had evidently been left to grow up from some spores of ant food left in the nest. It was of a handsome species; the cap was reddish purple and dotted over with small scales, the gills were white, and the spores of a yellowish color. He planted some of the spores, and they grew thriftily, thus proving that the ants really raise true mushrooms, and can be said to follow the occupation of kitchen-gardening.

Destroyers Supreme.

"We knew whenever a submarine left a German port, and we kept track of it day by day until it returned home," says Admiral William S. Sims, in the World's Work. "No U-boat ever made a voyage across the Atlantic without our knowledge. The submarine was a slow traveler, and required a minimum of 30 days for such a trip; normally the time would be much longer, for a submarine on this long voyage seldom cruises at more than five knots. Our destroyers and anti-submarine craft were much faster, and could easily cross the Atlantic in ten days. It is, therefore, apparent that a flotilla of destroyers stationed in European waters could protect the American coast from submarines almost as successfully as if it were stationed at Hampton Roads or Newport."

A Better Show.

A "militant," as the really virulent type of advanced woman is called, said to Governor Miller at a charity ball in Albany:

"You men! We'll take your special privileges from you yet. We'll oust you from politics, the arts and everything else."

Governor Miller smiled before the militant's ire. Then he nodded toward a group of pretty girls in backless and sleeveless gowns, short skirts and all the other extravagances of the 1921 mode.

"Oh, I don't know," he said. "As I look around, it seems to me that the ladies are giving man a better show than he ever had before."

New Wheat Storage Plan.

An old suggestion comes from England as to conserving wheat. It is proposed to crush or rough grind wheat, then soften with superheated steam and compress in hard blocks and store until wanted, when a simple crushing process would fit it for flour manufacture.—Scientific American.

He Couldn't.

The Orator—"Work, my friends, is the lot of man! Man was sent into this world to earn his living by the sweat of his brow. You didn't find Adam walking about the Garden of Eden with his hands in his pockets!" —The Passing Show (London).

GOT ALONG WITHOUT BOSSING

Joseph Pulitzer Selected His Right-Hand Men With Care, and Then Let Them Alone.

There is an old proverb to the effect that a good boss makes a good workman. There must be something in it. The most successful employers are those who have the most worth-while employees. Part of the success, no doubt, is in picking the employee. Another part, perhaps, is in letting him alone. If he is worth keeping he is worth trusting.

"Joseph Pulitzer never dictated to me," said Samuel G. Blythe, according to an exchange. "He never told me what to write or what not to. Only once in my life did he even make a request of me."

Blythe was for years the star man in the great blind editor's Washington bureau. Now and then, as Blythe explained, Mr. Pulitzer went to some trouble to prove in the editorial column that Blythe was suffering from a prolapsus of the intellect. Sometimes he massed facts to show that his opinion differed monumentally from that of his Washington luminary. But he never dictated, said Blythe. Or almost never. But once he did ask a favor.

"I had been sharpshooting at the manner in which a great firm of architects was abusing the exterior of the White House," said Blythe, "when one day I got a wire from the old man. It ran something like this:

"'Unless you have a deep personal feeling in the matter I wish you would cease further reference to the rebuilding of the White House. Please understand this is not a criticism of what you have written. But the same firm of architects is building a house for me, and if you don't lay off I'll not get into it for two years.'"

Blythe's conclusion was that an employer of that sort is fairly sure to have employees who will rob graves, sit up all night, or tear a thesaurus to tatters for him.

RULED LONG IN WILDERNESS

Colin Rankin, who died in Montreal recently at the age of ninety-four, was the first native Canadian to enter the service of the Hudson's Bay company. After a half-century in the company's employ, this patriarch of the fur trade retired as chief factor in 1898.

He was taken into the Hudson's Bay company's service in 1848 by Sir George Simpson, known as the "emperor governor." Sir George was one of the ablest of the long line of governors that began in 1670 with Prince Rupert, famous champion of the house of Stuart in Cromwellian wars. Under him, the company was merged with the North West company, which for years had been its deadly rival in the fur trade. Under him, too, the company reached its meridian of power and dominion and ruled three-fourths of the North American continent.

Mr. Rankin's service was almost exclusively in eastern Canada. He was in charge of posts at Mattawa, Lachine, St. Maurice, Kickendatch, Bersimis, Saguenay, Simcoe and Temiskaming. He was chief factor over the Lake Superior district and the Ottawa river district. He was known for his vigor of mind and body, and his career, which missed but six years of rounding out a century, was an epic of the wilderness adventure.

Flour Maker's Proud Record.

Ranking as the champion flour maker of the world, John Kraft, who retired March 1, after continuous service for 46 years, holds the unique record of making flour enough to feed the United States and its possessions for a period of one year.

Because of impaired vision, the Argonaut states, Mr. Kraft, who is sixty-nine years old, terminated his connection with a Minneapolis flour company after establishing a record which milling engineers believe will stand for many years. Engineers at the plant estimate that during his 46 years of active service Mr. Kraft made 135,-000,000 barrels of flour. According to the veteran miller, an average normal person consumes about one barrel of flour a year, or its equivalent. Mr. Kraft's output, therefore, could feed the population of the entire United States and its possessions, which is approximately 115,000,000, and at the end of the year have a large surplus.

Jugoslavia Prosperous.

Jugoslavia is reported to be in better financial condition than most of its neighbors. Its national debt is about [illegible] gold and the budget approximately balances. Per capita taxes are considerably less than one-third what they are in Roumania, Czechoslovakia and France. The wealth of the country is at present mainly agricultural. Grazing is an important industry. Several new factories have recently been opened and it is interesting to note that some of these are financed, wholly or in part, with the capital of Russian refugees who managed to bring their wealth with them when they escaped from their own country.

No One to Talk To.

The supervisor of the Cascade national forest in Oregon has engaged a number of women for duty as fire lookouts this summer. The women will dwell in lonely cabins on the high mountain peaks until the fall rains set in or until there is no further danger of forest fires.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Saturn Not So Large as Jupiter.

The planet Saturn is not quite as large as Jupiter. Its grand array of rings and satellites, however, renders it the most stupendous object in the solar system. To the naked eye, when [illegible] opposition, it shines as a bright star of the first magnitude.

Mustn't Expect To Much.

A United States senator had just finished a night's work on a speech. "You have convinced me," said his secretary, "except for one trifling detail. Where do I, the man who has to buy meat and bread, get off?" The senator touched his nose with his finger and replied sagely: "Well, no legislation is 100 per cent perfect."

ALSACE BEGINNING TO LIVE

Writer Finds a Feeling of Relief Pervading the People of the Province, With Reason.

It is a strange, yet stimulating experience for anyone who is interested in the relations between peoples to visit the much-contested strip of land known as Alsace. The last time I was in Alsace was more than twenty years ago. It was the day after Bismarck's death, and everywhere the black-white-red flags were hanging out at half-mast in honor of the man who had made the two provinces a Reichsland—part of the new German empire.

Today Bismarck's work is undone; gone, even from Germany itself, is the black-white-red flag, gone are the Prussian officers and officials, the red-hatted station masters, and all the other paraphernalia of imperial German routine. The older order survives but here and there, in the great official buildings erected and arranged on the grandiose German (or, as the Germans now call it, Wilhelmian) scale, in the familiar square blue German letter boxes, in the neat blue street signs which have been left standing with a neat new French sign affixed above or beneath. No doubt the minor officials have been but little changed. The village station master and the postman have but doffed their German insignia to don its more easy-fitting French equivalent. But if the men are the same, the faces, as well as the uniforms, are different. There is a feeling of relief, of detente, in the air. One has the sense of a people that has returned to the normal. At last, after a long ordeal, they can be themselves. They are free to settle down and to begin to live.—Alfred E. Zimmern in the Manchester Guardian.

Alliteration's Awful Antics.

Adam, an ancient antediluvian, ate an apple. Adam's angry Author aroused angrily at Adam's audacity; and, as all admit, Allah's affront admits approval. Adam admitted all, and as admonished, accepted Allah's alternative. "Abscond, Adam!" added Allah. "Amble away and act as awakened acolyte. Adieu, absent-minded Adam, and abhor absinthe always. Adam ambled away, and at all accounts admitted accountability. "All acts are awry," asserted Adam, and alas, after all, Adam and apples are always aptly and abjectly associated. Ain't apple acquisition awful? (Anyhow, as Adam acquired apples.)—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Jewsharp's Origin Hard to Trace.

The jewsharp is not a harp, and it has no connection with the Jews. The reason for the name is not known. Some authorities believe that it was originally called a jaw'sharp because it was played with the jaw. Others say it was first called the Jew's Trumpe, the name coming from the French word "jeu"—a "jeutrump" or joy trumpet. Other peoples call it a mouth-drum or a humming-[illegible] while the Italians designated it as the "scacciapensiere," banisher of thought. The actual origin of the instrument, which is a universal sound producer, is not known. It is known to be of very ancient origin, for the Chinese books of the twelfth century show the jewsharp as almost identical with the European form.

Best Way to Cut Cardboard.

Cardboard is used for so many purposes that it is well to know how to cut straight edges. Never use scissors for the purpose, because that makes ragged edges. Firmly lay a brass-edged ruler on the cardboard with brass edge upward. As the ruler is beveless, the brass will be a fraction of an inch above the board when properly placed. Now procure a very sharp penknife, hold the ruler firmly, and draw the knife along the brass edge. Do not attempt to cut through the cardboard the first time, but merely score it deeply. Now repeat the ruler and cut through the incision. The result will be as clean a cut edge as a picture dealer can make on his mats.

Vectis and Mona Islands.

Vectis is the Roman name of the Isle of Wight, an island in the English channel, belonging to Hampshire, England, separated from the mainland by the channels of Solent and Spithead. It is traversed by a range of chalk downs, and is noted for picturesque scenery. Its area is 145 square miles. Mona is the Latin name of Anglesea, Anglesey, or Angesea, is an island and county of North Wales, which lies northwest of the mainland from which it is separated by Menai strait. It was an ancient seat of the Druids, was conquered by the Romans under Suetonius Paulinus in 61 A. D., and by Agricola in 78. Later it became a Welsh stronghold.

Telephone for the Deaf.

The "[illegible]," for people hard of hearing, is the smallest telephone yet produced. It is about an inch long, and its open end being inserted in the ear, is held there by its shape, no strap being necessary. It is adjustable for maximum clearness. The usual mouthpiece could not be employed, and a piece of specially treated silk with a bit of iron in its center is substituted.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Aug 4.—Frank Cafero, 12, was blown to pieces and his brothers, Joseph, 9, and John, 15, injured when a bomb with which they were playing at their home in Staten Island exploded today.

The children had found the bomb on the federal quarantine grounds, and took it home to play with. Frank struck it with a hammer, and the resulting explosion tore him to pieces, while his brothers, nearby, were struck by fragrants. The eldest brother was taken to the hospital while little Joseph escaped with only slight injuries.

How the bomb came on government property is a mystery.

DIDN'T HAVE TO ASK FOR IT

Simple Matter of Finance by Which Frederick Became Possessed of All-Day Sucker.

Frederick has not yet learned the addition and multiplication tables, but he has reached such an understanding of finance as a verb transitive that one wonders as to his future.

"Here, Frederick, you be mother's big man and take this empty milk bottle to the grocery on the corner and bring back a full bottle of fresh milk for baby."

"And I pay the money to the man, mumsie?"

"No, dear. You know how we get it sometimes. The man will charge it."

"Haven't you got any pennies, mumsie?"

"No, Frederick, mumsie hasn't any pennies for candy this time. Now be careful. That's a nice little man."

Frederick returned safely with a bottle of best grade milk. Also, he had a fine all-day sucker in his mouth.

"Why, Frederick! I hope you didn't ask the grocer to give you that candy!"

The sucker had to be removed before the youngster could articulate.

"No—I wouldn't ask—I paid for it."

"Paid! Where did you get the money?"

"He give me a nickel for the empty bottle and then I pay for the sucker, and then—then he charge you for the new bottle milk."

WHAT REAL VACATION MEANS

A real vacation, if you can get one, consists of play, asserts Preston Slosson in the New York Independent. Play is the opposite of work. Play is whatever is done for its own sweet sake. If you build a fire to warm yourself or to cook a dinner you are at work.

If you build a bonfire because you like to see sparks redden against the sable background of the night you are at play. If you dance to improve your waistline or to learn a new step you are working.

If you dance because you "just can't make your feet behave" when the orchestra starts, you are playing.

If you go fishing to catch fish you are as much at work as if you were building bridges or writing editorials to make money. If you go fishing in the true fisherman's spirit you won't care much whether they bite or not.

The vacation mind is a law unto itself. If it enjoys an occupation it keeps on while the enjoyment lasts, though every fiber of the tired body may be shouting "quit."

If it ceases to enjoy an occupation it stops at once, though it create consternation all around. A real vacation is a trip into a fairyland, where the natives never heard of duties or obligations and the only law is "Do what you really like."

Cherry and Plum Trees.

Can you positively distinguish between a cherry tree and a plum tree in the spring of the year before the trees carry fruit? You may think that you can, yet, so similar are some cherry and plum trees that eventually you will surely fail unless you employ the simple rule that trained horticulturists follow. That one infallible guide is this: The leaves of the cherry, both in the bud and just after emerging from the bud, are folded together like the pages in a book, while those of the plum are rolled up like a magazine. And, by the way, the leaves of the peach are folded like those of the cherry, and the leaves of the apricot are rolled like those of the plum.

Well Supplied.

Emery had the whooping cough, and it had hung on for a long time. In the worst of it he had contracted a bad cold that added to his discomfort. When he had finally recovered from the effects of that, he was once more allowed to play out of doors.

One morning, as he started out, he commenced to sneeze, and his mother exclaimed in despair: "O, Emery, you have taken another cold," but did not keep him in the house.

He was swinging on the front gate as one of the neighbors went by, who hailed him with, "Hello, Emery. How are you this morning—pretty well?"

Protects From Corrosion.

Browning electrolytically is the method of protecting aluminum and aluminum alloys from corrosion proposed by L. von Goulbert. The electrolyte consists of a sulphur compound of molybdenum, and the metal to be protected is suspended in the solution with a zinc anode at a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees C. The dark brown coating soon developed is not cracked by bending or rolling the metal. The aluminum articles coated in this way are stated to have been free from corrosion even after immersion in salt solution for two months.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Aug. 4.—Changes in securities on the stock exchange continued irregular this morning and trading was active. Mexican Petroleum was unchanged at 107¼. Baldwin Locomotive was unaltered at 75½. American Locomotive declined ½ to 83¾. Sinclair Oil rose ⅛ to 20¾. American Sugar was off ⅜ to 65¼. U. S. Steel declined ⅛ to 75½. Reading declined ½ to 79⅛. Southern Pacific rose ¼ to 79. Studebaker rose 1¼ to 79¾. Bethlehem Steel "B" rose 1 point to 51 and Royal Dutch rose ⅜ to 52. Chandler Motors as also active and strong moving up 1¾ to 49¾. Central Leather issues were weak, the common falling one point to 33 and the preferred was down ⅜ to 65½. Union Pacific opened up ⅞ at 122½. Northern Pacific was in supply, yielding ⅜ to 78¼ and Republic Steel was down ½ to 47¼.

Price movements continued irregula during the first hour and business generally was quiet. Most importance was attached to the trading in Vivaudou, which moved up to 71⅞, an advance of 1 point from the close yesterday, the buying generally coming from interests identified with the property. Studebaker reacted from 80½ to 79⅜ but was in demand and again quickly rallied to 80½. Chandler Motors, after advancing to 49¾, reacted to 48¾. Northern Pacific continued in supply, selling down to 78, a loss of 1 point. The steel industrials were generally well held and showed little changes.

Business on the stock exchange became extremely quiet in the afternoon and the market was then without support feature. Many of the stocks that had made advances around midday were in moderate supply in the later trading, and sustained moderate reaction. Pierce Arrow issues were under special pressure, the common stock yielding over 1 point to 14⅛ and the preferred dropping over 4 points to 29. U. S. Steel held around 75¾. American Sugar Refining, after rising from 67, reacted to 66¼.

The market closed heavy; government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds strong.

Attempted Extortion.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 4.—Accused of attempting to extort $4,000 from Giuseppe Drazo, 59 years old, of No. 160 Seventh street, under threat of death, two men and a woman are under arrest here after an automobile chase from the Drazo home. Drazo, who is a retired huckster, received two letters demanding money.

Bear Invaded a Flivver.

Even bears like motorcars, as is proved by an incident which occurred in Giant forest, California. A sedan was left at the foot of Moro rock while the occupants climbed the stairway to the glorious views of the Kaweah range and the San Joaquin valley. On their return they found a black bear comfortably seated inside the car, which he had entered through an open window. Bruin was looking up the last of the sandwiches in the lunch and was persuaded to leave his comfortable quarters only at the point of a pole.

Not a Bad Description.

Alice was taken to a dance one evening. The next day, while playing with her playmates, her mother overheard her telling them about the dance. And this is the way she described it: "The people put their arms around the mummies, and they just walked, and walked and walked."

WISDOM OF TAKING "DAY OFF"

Leisure Time, That Has Been Earned Means Better Health and Better Work Afterward.

"There is nothing that clears the cobwebs so effectually out of one's brain as a day off," the Young-Old Philosopher was saying. "Just as we plan our work, we should plan our play only, most of us, in the clamor of the times, forget that to loaf occasionally is as necessary as to drudge; and we confuse leisure with laziness.

"I know in my own case how difficult it is for me to make up my mind, definitely and unbendingly, that I require now and then, a morning away from my desk.

"So if the day off means so much to us, mentally and physically, why are we afraid to take it when the opportunity arrives? I like nothing better than to see, in the big town, a group of middle-aged men hastening out in a motor car on some crisp morning, their golf sticks piled beside them, while others trudge to dreary tasks. They have earned their liberty, no doubt—let us hope so, at any rate; and they will be all the better tomorrow for those few hours of delightful sport and health-giving freedom.

"Too soon the curtain is rung down on this glowing world we live in; and it is heartbreaking to consider how many spots there are close at our gates which we never find the time to see and enjoy. Partly it is our own fault. The green earth cries out to us to come and tread the corridors of the countryside; instead, we cling to the granite of the city, and pace desolate hallways—the more desolate because they are crowded with people we do not know. And all of them are hurrying—where?

"I wonder. And so, no doubt, do they."—From the Outlook.

"Star Chamber Proceedings" an Echo of the Days When Kings Could Do No Wrong.

"Star Chamber Proceeding" is an expression now almost invariably used to denote an official action which is conducted in secret and, usually, in a high-handed manner.

The phrase comes to us from the fact that centuries ago there existed in England an all-powerful tribunal consisting of a committee of the king's privy council. The custom was either instituted or revived by Henry VII. in 1486.

This council had omnipotent powers and was unfettered by rules of law. It dealt with civil and criminal cases alike by "bill and information," without the aid of a jury, and could inflict any form of punishment short of death.

The original was "star chamber" because in the room where the council met were deposited the Jewish bonds known as "stars" from the Hebrew word shetar, meaning a covenant.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Chinese Shoes Homemade.

There are shoemakers among the Chinese and shoes of varying grades are for sale in the shops, but many of the shoes worn by upper-class Chinese are products not of the shops but of the home. For the Chinese woman of good family who has been educated in the old-fashioned way, considers it both a duty and a pleasure to make the family shoes, and she lavishes upon them the money, the leisure, the taste and skill that do not enter into the making of the commercial article, writes Roland Gorbold in Asia Magazine.

The more wealthy Chinese men wear very charming, if somewhat unusual shoes, which might almost be called slippers. The soles, very much turned up at the toe, are made of bamboo and pith covered with white linen and are extremely rigid and light. The uppers of a pair in my collection are of pale blue silk, with an appliqued toe and motifs of purple and much embroidered in yellow, red and blue, enriched with gold.

Long Career as Statesman.

John Quincy Adams was the only ex-President who had a long public career after leaving the White House. Two years after his retirement from the presidency in 1829 he was elected to the house of representatives where he served until his death, more than 16 years later. He rendered ten years of public service after passing seventy, and was known as "the old man eloquent." Edward Everett Hale, in his "Memories of a Hundred Years," tells of a Down East sea captain who said he wished "they could take the old engine out of Adams and put it into a new hull." Adams was stricken in his seat at the capitol in Washington on a spot that is still pointed out to visitors.

Browning's Poetry.

The truth is that many readers of verse expect and demand upon their intellects; poetry to them being only a pleasing indulgence—an occasional substitute for a shocker—not to be taken seriously. Certainly Browning's poetry is not for such. No one today who knows "Sordello" considers it, for, different as it is to the beginner, it contains many veins of the pure gold of poetry and its pictures of the passionate tumultuous life of the late Twelfth and early Thirteenth centuries in Italy, with the fierce conflicts of Ghelf and Ghibelline by which it was torn are presented in vividness and truth by any historian.—Philip Sutton Mason.

Town of the Nymphs.

A Tokyo correspondent of the New York World writes that not far from the city of Ishinomonmy, on the Pacific coast of Honde, the largest of the islands which compose the Japanese empire, is a remarkable settlement commonly known as the Town of the Nymphs. It is several centuries old, and peculiar in that its women rule, the wife supporting the head of the family, while the husbands keep house, tend the children and do other work that elsewhere is in the woman's province. Because their business is to dive in the sea for pearls these women are called nymphs by the Japanese. The settlement is on Ishikaw bay, where pearl shells are numerous and are taken from the bottom of the sea.

Fossilized Blood.

Blood is an extremely perishable substance, yet traces have been left and have been recognized after lapses of several thousand years. Traces of blood six thousand years old have been found in mummies, and bloodstains have been discovered upon bandages used in the surgery of ancient Egypt. In Siberia remains of it were recognized in frozen mammoths, whose flesh was fresh enough to be eaten by dogs after about 175,000 years of icy entombment. R. L. Moodie of the University of Illinois has found in the bone of a dinosaur some bodies which looked remarkably like blood, but his investigations have now satisfied him that they were really blood.

Progress Never Ceases.

The tree of life from primordial cells up to mammals shows intelligence ever widening up to man, declares a writer in the Minneapolis Journal. The human tribe and clan have foregleams of their organization in the social life of bees and ants. All animals are somewhere on the road to progress. Some stop at one point and some at another. But the higher animals retaining plastic power are but a little behind the lowest type of man. The separating line seems to be that man in some stage of his career becomes self-conscious and reaches abstract conceptions. Many animals clearly display elements of conscious life that reach a more complete manifestation in man.

Spiders That Fish.

It has been thought a wonderful thing that a dog has caught fish, but more wonderful as a fisherman is a spider that is found in South Africa. It measures four inches across with legs stretched out. It places itself at the edge of the water with two of its legs on a pebble or stone and the other legs spread out on the water. As the spider sits motionless, a fish comes swimming along under the spider's outstretched legs, which are then suddenly thrust down into the water, closed around the fish, and the spider makes a downward plunge, driving its fangs into it. At once the spider climbs out on its pebble or stone and devours the fish.

Millionth of a Second.

A chronoscope is employed when experimenting with high-power explosives used in guns, which registers the velocity of the projectile at sixteen successive points before it leaves the bore. It is possible with this apparatus to register time to the millionth of a second. In the older experiments, where the velocity did not exceed 1,500 or 1,600 feet per second this projectile recorded its time by knocking down a series of steel triggers projecting into the bore. But with velocities of several thousand feet per second the trigger, instead of dropping, frequently plowed a groove in the projectile, and this new device became necessary.

First Aid Raid.

Five zealous Hollywood Boy Scouts have suffered a shock. They noticed, while on their way to camp, a man apparently endeavoring to entice away two little girls who were crying bitterly. Promptly they surrounded him, threw him to the ground, and bound him hand and foot with ropes. Three scouts remained to guard him and the others went for the police. On returning they made the bitter discovery that not only had their victim escaped, but that he was an inoffensive father who had been taking his unwilling children home to bed."—Los Angeles Times.

Burden of Riches.

Those who envy the rich should read what William Henry Vanderbilt said, shortly before his death: "The care of $200,000,000 is too great a load for any brains or back to bear; it is enough to kill a man. There is no pleasure to be got out of it as an offset—no good of any kind. I have no real gratification or enjoyment of any sort more than my neighbor, who is worth only half a million. So when I lay down the heavy responsibility, I want my sons to divide it and share the worry which it will cost to keep it."

"I Shall Not Pass This Way Again."

Efforts to identify the author of this much-quoted quotation have failed. It has been attributed to Stephen Grellet, an American Quaker of French birth (1773-1855); R. W. Emerson, Edward Courtenay, earl of Devon; Sir Roland Hill (1744-1833); Marcus Aurelius, Miss A. R. Wagenaar, Addison, Thomas Carlyle and others. And it is also said that the germ of it is to be found in the writings of a Chinese philosopher. There seems to be quite authority in favor of Grellet being the author, but the passage does not occur in any of his printed works.

GYPSIES FEEL WAR'S EFFECTS

In Rumania They Are Said to Be Starving—Slaves to Ancient Superstitions.

Of the dozens of different races in Rumania, none is more picturesque than the gypsies. Like their prototypes in other lands they rove the country in great caravans, earning stray pennies by begging, dancing, playing and telling fortunes.

In the cities they sometimes earn their "bread and onions" by shining shoes, peddling lemonade or acting as porters.

The high cost of living, which has drawn tight the strings of every purse, has brought double hardships to these wanderers. No matter how well they play their violins, no matter what good fortunes they see in the stars for those about them, they find it hard to coax pennies from the empty pockets of the war-oppressed Rumanian people. Many of them have starved to death.

Among the gypsy women and girls are to be found some striking types of beauty. Dark of complexion and hair, with shining, long-lashed black eyes, they are a delight to look upon. They have not yet acquired the art of using cosmetic as their sisters in other countries do.

Superstition plays a large part in the life of the gypsy. One of the many ancient customs which will survive among the women is to beat themselves frightfully if one of their children dies. They believe that the death has been caused by an evil spirit having entered the body of the child as well as the mother, and that if they chastise themselves the spirit will depart.

One Rumanian gypsy woman whom a relief worker visited was apparently about to die from pneumonia. The doctor found numerous bruises all over her chest, and these had seriously aggravated her condition. On questioning her he learned her bruises were due to a beating she had given herself because one of her eight children had died.

Art of Conversation.

Conversation reaches its best when it leaves veils and convention behind it, when people speak face to face. It may be impossible to attain this with many; in this perfect sense there are only a few with whom we really talk, and we cannot always talk even with them. It is, of course, always easy to exchange words, but many words may be uttered and yet nothing have been said.

There are moments when the veils are thrust aside and the closest intercourse becomes for a brief time possible. It is then that people talk of the one thing they know best, of their own self, and the self's relation to life's mysteries; it is then, and then only, that we approach the absolute, the true, though still it may be only at a distance.

The last reserve between soul and soul is rarely surrendered; and there is always the reserve, the limitation, that lies in the nature of spoken words.—Arthur L. Salmon in Chicago Daily News.

Not a Jim Dandy.

Dealers and manufacturers seeking permits to handle alcohol are required to answer innumerable questions on blanks supplied by the office of Charles J. Orbison, federal prohibition director for Indiana. Few fill out the blanks correctly the first time. Many become worried before they are through.

A permit seeker from the northern part of the state sent in his application. Then he had to change a serial number and then again a decimal fraction and then something else until at last he became dissatisfied with the whole arrangement. He wrote a letter to the prohibition director, and this is what he said:

"Say, do you know what a Jim Dandy is? Well, a Jim Dandy is a fellow who can keep up with all this — red tape and monkey business connected with alcohol. And I'm not a Jim Dandy."—Indianapolis News.

Ex-Convicts Hold Reunion.

There is one news story in New York that the newspapers kindly suppress each year. At least they do not mention any names. In one of the big hotels there is an annual dinner in a private banquet hall. Well-dressed men in evening clothes to the number of forty attend. There is nothing about them to indicate that they are anything but what they are—successful business men. They discuss over their meal the topics of the day and all know each other by first names. But when cigars are lighted, waiters and bus boys are driven out and the doors are locked. Then they discuss the past. All are ex-convicts who have served terms in Sing Sing. Two or three former wardens are usually the guests of honor. They have proved that an ex-convict can make good.

Trying to Save the Elk.

The elk are in danger of extermination, 10,000 head supposed to be in the Yellowstone having disappeared. This seems to be caused by cattle men grazing their herds on areas formerly occupied by the elk, which perish in great numbers when they find their old pastures denuded. Ranchers in many cases have fed them hay out of pity and the federal authorities have bought and stored hay in the hope of preserving the breed. Cattle men are not much interested by these splendid examples of animal life, so that the government should do something on a large scale to preserve them.—Scientific American.

French Deputies Fear Flag-Fist.

An American legislature may be brought to order and made to listen to the chair, as a rule, when the gavel is pounded loudly enough and continuously enough, but when the French chamber of deputies grows excited there is another method of restoring order. When the deputies have come to the state where they are pounding on desks with their canes and standing on chairs to shout abuse at each other over intervening heads, and when blows threaten and duels are in the air, the president of the chamber opens the lower right hand corner of his desk—the deep drawer—and takes out an ancient flag hat which must have been installed there shortly after the French revolution, to judge from its cut, and solemnly he rises to his feet, holding the hat out at arm's length. One by one the raging deputies notice the pose and the hat, and they fall silent before the threat, in fear that the hat in the president's hand may be put on his head. If it is that act adjourns the chamber.—La France, New York.

Reading Aloud.

It seems a misfortune that the art of reading aloud has lapsed to such an appreciable extent. To read well is no mean accomplishment, although not usually included in the bag of ordinary "parlor tricks." It necessitates not only the unhesitating pronunciation of words, but the quick grasp of the author's meaning, the placing of proper accent, the sense of rhythm that gives a certain melody to prose, the avoidance of sing-song poetry, and also and more important, a pleasant, well-modulated and sympathetic voice. Many who profess to find peace "nowhere save in a corner with a book," admit they find little pleasure in being read to, asserting appreciation and memory are assisted by the sight of the printed word. This is probably due to unusualness and would pass away in a short time.

Need of Friendship.

He that can only be useful on great occasions may die without exercising his abilities and stand a helpless spectator of a thousand vexations which fret away happiness and which nothing is required to remove but a little dexterity of conduct and readiness of expedients. No degree of knowledge attainable by man is able to set him above the want of hourly assistance, or to extinguish the desire of fond endearments and tender officiousness; and, therefore, no one should think it unnecessary to leave those arts by which friendship is gained. Kindness is preserved by constant reciprocation of benefits and interchange of pleasures; but such benefits can only be bestowed as others are capable to receive, and such pleasures imparted as others are qualified to enjoy.—Dr. Samuel Johnson.

Material Must Be in the Mind.

It's folly to imagine you can put anything into your mind. People by the thousands think they can put anything they want into other people's minds. The best they can do is to stir up natural ability. With this awakened there can be developed anything that lies within the range of the individual personality. The result will be that the mind will be able to do many things that not having been aroused it could never do. Some people get aroused in schools. Others with natural bents toward the why of things learn to think without the stimulus of others and give to the world many thoughts that help it to live better. One builds within the mind from the material stored there.

Systematize Work.

The skillful mechanic does not have to think how to employ the tools of his trade. Long use has accustomed him to work with them rapidly and accurately. If you have a routine work to do, learn to do it with as little mental effort as possible. The effort that will count in your success is the effort you bestow not on routine tasks but on unusual tasks. If your mind is continually occupied with the details of the job you will be in the same position as an executive who tried to run an office by doing everybody's work, thereby keeping him so close to details that he could have no perspective and exercise no generalship.—John Blake in Chicago Daily News.

Splendid Tapestry Borders.

The finest of all borders existing on extant tapestries are those by a pupil of van Orley's called Jan van Liere and belonging to a tapestry here exhibited called "Romulus Proclaimed King." It is of gold, silk and wool, the third of a series of six representing the foundation of Rome, woven probably from van Orley's designs, although the drawings by him in Munich intended for the same object do not agree with this tapestry. The extraordinary beauty of the landscape in the top left-hand corner and the strewn flowers in the foreground make this work a joy to see.

Rich Sulphur District.

At some remote time there must have been tremendous volcanic activity in the region which is today the gulf coast of Louisiana and Texas; for in these parts are found deposits of sulphur vastly exceeding in quantity any known elsewhere in the world. They are covered over by hundreds of feet of later sedimentary material, and to get at the sulphur, deep wells have to be sunk. Superheated water is forced down the pipes to melt the sulphur, which is brought to the surface by the power of compressed air. On cooling it is ready for shipment, being 99 per cent pure.

LOCAL DEATH RECORD.

Recent Deaths and Funerals of Persons In This Vicinity.

Peter Saile died at his home in Saxton on Thursday, July 28, at the age of 74 years. Deceased is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Edward N. Lasher of Kiskatown and Miss Ella C. Saile, and two sons, Charles H. and George W. Saile, of Saxton. Five grandchildren, one great grandchild, and one brother. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at his home and were conducted by the Rev. I. H. Heinrichs of Leeds. Burial was in Jefferson Rural cemetery, Catskill.

The funeral of Mrs. Hubert Caffrey was held this morning from her late residence, No. 19 Foxhall avenue, at 9 o'clock and from St. Mary's Church at 9.30, where a requiem Mass was offered for the repose of her soul by the Very Rev. Dean J. J. Hickey. The pall bearers were David Long, Thomas Murray, James Brennan, John McGrane, Peter Falvey and James Fergerson. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, showing the high esteem in which she was held. The interment was in St. Mary's Cemetery. Dean Hickey accompanied the remains to the cemetery and conducted the committal services. During the services at the church solos were rendered by Miss Heidecamp and Joseph Murphy. At the conclusion of the church services Miss Heidecamp sang "Beautiful Land on High."

Willis J. Roe died at his home, 117 North Front street, Wednesday afternoon, the result of a stroke of paralysis, the second one in two days. He was the son of the late John Roe who for a number of years was engaged in the teaming of bluestone and freight from the New York nightboats before the West Shore railroad was built, carting the freight to the uptown merchants and bluestone from the quarries in the town of Kingston to Wilbur. Willis, his son, and Chester B. Roe, for a long term of years a motorman on the trolley lines, succeeded their father in the teaming business continuing for several years. Deceased for some time kept a saloon on North Front street near Green street, and owned a number of properties in that section. Last week he awarded a contract for the erection of a large garage there. He is survived by two sons, Willis, Jr., and Irven Roe and one daughter, Mrs. Charles A. Johnston; also two brothers, John B. Roe of Brooklyn and Chester B. Roe of this city. Mrs. Roe, the wife of deceased, died on July 6, less than a month ago. The funeral services will be held from the funeral parlors of A. Carr & Son, 1 Pearl street, Saturday at 10 a. m. Interment in Wiltwyck cemetery.

Their Real Reason.

"But I thought men were supposed to adore women for having just what they haven't got, just as we adore them for their physical strength and their brains." "So they say, and so we say, because otherwise there would be no marriages," said Mrs. Vachell. "But it is a lie. We only love their strength for the sake of getting the better of it. They cultivate our foolishness because it gives them rest from competition, and they can sit down and plume themselves."—From "Three Loving Ladies," by Mrs. Dowdall.

The Huguenots.

Huguenots was the name applied by the Roman Catholics to the Protestants of France during the religious struggles of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries. The term is of doubtful origin. Some authorities say it is corrupted through Iguenots, Eyguenots, from the German Eidgenossen, confederates; while according to others, the word is a diminutive of Hugo, Hugues, Hugh, a patron saint of Tours.

Peroxide Good Remedy.

For a painful ulcerated tooth use peroxide, either full strength or diluted one-half with warm (not hot) water. Nothing will relieve more quickly and it will cleanse the mouth and sweeten the breath. It is used for sore throat as well as for sores of all kinds, as it is antiseptic and one of the safest and cheapest germicides known. If it seems to make the gums a little sensitive after using, rinse the mouth with a weak solution of baking soda.

COLONIALS WIN FROM SOLDIERS

It was a crackerjack game up to the sixth frame Wednesday afternoon at the Athletic Field when the ball tossers of the Army Reserve Depot of Schenectady clashed with the Colonial A. C., but in the seventh inning Miner Deitz, the Schenectady twirler, weakened and the locals with their batting togs on hammered out seven runs before the smoke of battle cleared. In the eighth frame the locals scored five more runs, which with the run obtained in the third stanza made their total score for the afternoon 13 runs, while the visitors had but three chalk marks on their side of the score board. McAuliffe was in the box for the locals and pitched excellent ball.

The score by innings: R.H.E.
Schenectady
0 0 0 2 1 0 0 0 0— 3 9 1
Colonials
0 0 1 0 0 0 7 5 x—13 16 3

AT THE THEATRES.

Ethel Clayton At Keeney's—Wanda Hawley At Auditorium.

Ethel Clayton, charming Paramount star, has never appeared to better advantage than in "The Price of Possession" at Keeney's tonight. The scenes are laid in Australia and England and the variety is refreshing and as the action of the story never lags, interest is kept on the qui vive from start to finish. One scene where Miss Clayton makes a dive from the window of a tower into the sea and her rescue by the hero, is highly effective and thrilling. Rockliffe Fellows plays the leading male role. Friday and Saturday the super-special of the week's program is "The Passionate Pilgrim" an action newspaper story that breathes action, and suspense throughout. Snooky the Humanzee and the children lovable in "You'll be Surprised," a new comedy of thrills.

"Her First Elopement" at the Auditorium tonight, is a gay, out-of-doors comedy of surprise and amusing complications, with mischievous Wanda Hawley as the heroine. Art Accord in "The White Horseman" is the thrilling western chapter play, also Al St. John in a Sunshine comedy "The Simp." Friday Nick Carter in "The Opium Case."

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Reformed Church will hold their midweek prayer meeting tonight at 8 o'clock. Miss Beatrice Polhemus will give a report on some of the new methods for C. E. work that were suggested at the world's convention, held in New York city recently.

The teachers, both regular and assistant, of the Sunday school of the Reformed Church will meet immediately after the C. E. meeting tonight for the purpose of making out the soliciting lists for the picnic. It is very important that all teachers be present.

A meeting is called for Friday night of this week at 8 o'clock in the Sunday school room of the Reformed Church of all those who have been appointed to serve on committees of the block party, which will be given in the near future by the Young People's Societies of the Methodist and Reformed Churches. Strong Words Against Jazz Music.

It will be recalled that some time ago our local Federation of Women's Clubs voted to do all in its power to secure better music for our movies and, for our young people everywhere, for that matter. Following out this avowed purpose, the Federation of Women's Clubs has asked The Freeman to bring to the attention of its readers the announcement of an article entitled "Does Jazz Put the Sin in Syncopation?" appearing in the August number of the Ladies' Home Journal, written by Mrs. Rose E. Obendorfer, national music chairman of the General Federation of Music Clubs. The following paragraph is taken from the article, giving pith and point indeed to the title: "Dancing to Mozart minuets, Strauss waltzes and Sousa two-steps would never lead to the corset-check room which now holds sway in hotels, clubs and dance halls. Nor would a girl who wore a corset in those days have been dubbed 'Old Ironsides,' and left a disconsolate wall-flower in a corner of the ballroom." Again: "Jazz originally was the accompaniment of the Voodoo dancer stimulating the half-crazed barbarian to the vilest deeds." But Mrs. Obendorfer does more than criticise jazz music, she tells how not only the music department of the General Federation of Music Clubs, which has taken as its motto, "To Make Good Music Popular and Popular Music Good," but the best American musicians everywhere in devising the utmost in order that the standard of dance music and movie music.

At Sahler's Chautauqua.

There was a large attendance Wednesday evening at the Dr. C. O. Sahler Chautauqua and all present were delighted with the rendition of the musical program and with the entertainment. Miss Margaret Anzie of Clinton avenue, with Frederick Van Dyck at the piano as accompanist, rendered two groups of song numbers most artistically. She has a rich soprano voice that has been well trained and with her charming personality made a great impression on the audience and was pronounced by the music students and critics as a coming vocal artist with a future that will bring her fame as a soprano soloist. Miss Clara Aimee Gottschalk was heard in three piano solos, each being artistically rendered, that called for encores. Mrs. Anne Hunsicker, the dramatic reader, was on the program for two readings.

Thought It Was a Subway.

Benny Leonard, world's lightweight champion boxer, was among the traffic law violators at Wurtsboro, Sullivan county, recently. He saw Traffic Officer Neels raise his hand, but he sped on. The officer mounted his trusty motorcycle and went after him. When he overhauled Leonard he required him to return to Wurtsboro, where he took him before Justice of the Peace Ainsworth. Leonard explained that in traveling through the county he found many people who recognized and saluted him. When he saw the officer's hand raised he thought it was simply getting a salute and did not stop. The justice bestowed a fine and discharged the fighter.
